U. S. Gives Tito Permit To Import Steel Mill

By The Associated Press

The United States has granted Yugoslavia permission to buy the materials for a steel mill from an American company, Government officials disclosed last night.

The decision marks the biggest step yet by the American Government to strengthen Marshal Tito in his fight with Moscow.

It is the first time since the cold war began that the Administration has agreed to ship "war potential" goods to a Communist-ruled nation.

The shipment was approved after months of argument between the State and National Defense departments and other top agencies of the Government.

To Cost 3 Million Dollars

The mill, valued at approximately three million dollars, will be built by the Continental Foundry and Machinery Co. of Pittsburgh and is to be delivered in 12 months.

These Government officials said it is a blooming and slabbing mill designed to process and refine steel ingots and would not increase Yugoslavia's steel capacity but only its ability to refine it.

Secretary of State Acheson, it was learned, led the fight for approval within the Administration, arguing it was a "calculated risk" necessary to bolster Yugoslavia's recovery.

The Yugoslav government, in appealing for the right to place an order for the mill, said it was vitally needed to turn out rails and other structural steel essential to the Yugoslav recovery program.

Johnson Approves

Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson first opposed the deal on security grounds, officials said. But later, he dropped his objections on the understanding the decision can be reviewed prior to shipment in the light of conditions existing then.

Acheson has agreed to this provision and the Commerce Department has now notified the Yugoslav Embassy that the necessary export license for the mill will be granted.

Yugoslavia's Ambassador Sava Kosanovic called on Secretary Acheson Tuesday to discuss the matter and thank him on behalf of his government, it was reported.

Seen as Morale Boost

State Department officials expect that news of the decision will bolster Tito's government economically and in addition will be a big morale factor.

Russia and the other eastern European governments, on the contrary, can be expected to blast the move as a sign that Tito is now allying himself with the capitalist nations.

Poland and Czechoslovakia have appealed repeatedly for machinery and equipment from the United States but their requests have been turned down. Czechoslovakia has several million dollars worth of equipment already manufactured and paid for in the United States for which it can get no export licenses.

Stocks Approach Year's Top Price In Buying Wave

New York, Aug. 17 (AP).—A buying wave that gained momentum late in the day pushed the stock market today to the highest point of the current midsummer rally.

Prices on the average stand only slightly below the highest level of the year attained last January.

The volume of business expanded to 1,410,000 shares, as against 830,000 shares yesterday. Of this total, Commonwealth & Southern accounted for 345,300 shares.

Some of the principal gains and closing prices include United States Steel up 50 cents at $23, DuPont $1.37 at $52.62, Standard Oil (NJ) $1.12 at $68.12, and B. F. Goodrich $3 at $63.

All Eyes on the Potato

200 Acres Planted in Spuds Yield Anyone $100,000 Gross

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Caribou, Me.—At least 31 farmers of Aroostook County got more than $100,000 apiece from the Government potato price support program last year. A number got several times that amount.

Among the big growers who received man-sized fortunes for one harvest, whose names have not been previously revealed, are: Phil A. Christie, of Presque Isle; Frank J. Hussey of Presque Isle, president of the Maine Potato Growers; Harold Daigle, Leo Daigle, and David Daigle of Fort Kent; Frank Martin and sons of Fort Kent; Harry Escovitz of Fort Kent; Felix La Joie of Van Buren; Herbert L. Cyr of Van Buren; Joseph R. LaPoint of Van Buren; F. A. Wathem, manager of S. Nightingale & Co. of Fort Fairfield and Gordon Robertson of Beaverbrook Farms Corp. of Caribou.

Several of these are reputed to have sold from a quarter to half a million dollars worth of potatoes at support price level or above. Part went directly to the Government, part went to regular customers of long standing, but at prices that the Government purchase program made possible.

All producers who sell potatoes get the benefit of the price support purchase operations whether or not they sell directly to the Government, Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan recently pointed out in a discussion of last year's costs.

Earlier, The Washington Post listed 10 growers who had received sums in six figures for the portion of their crop sold to the Government. Local operators assert those figures—showing some getting as high as half a million from the Government—are misleading. They do not include the returns from sales to others than Commodity Credit Corporation. In some instances the non-Government sales equaled the totals received from CCC. In one case, and maybe more, the income from the 1948 crop approached a million dollars.

The crop was so generally good last year that any farmer who planted 200 acres of potatoes grossed $100,000 or more, Carvell E. Foster, buyer for Production and Marketing Administration and the CCC in Aroostook County, estimated.

Foster said his survey showed 31 with at least 200 acres.

Big Dip Seen In Britain's Dollars, Gold

By Ned Russell

London, Aug. 17 (NYHT).—Gold and dollar reserves of Britain and the sterling area probably will drop by about 400 million dollars during the present quarter, it was learned tonight. This would be the biggest three-month fall so far, and might produce irresistible pressure for devaluation of sterling.

This estimate for the July-August-September quarter compares with the drop of 260 million dollars in the previous quarter.

The critical situation confronting Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Stafford Cripps and Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin when they go to Washington September 7 for monetary talks, will be made worse by the prospect of British gold and dollar reserves dipping to approximately $1,200,000,000.

The fall in reserves is expected to produce the strongest argument so far in favor of devaluation.

It was learned tonight the agenda for the Washington talks includes at least one general item under which devaluation could be discussed.

Financial experts believed tonight Sir Stafford would be unable to maintain his present adamant opposition to devaluation in face of the need for drastic and dramatic emergency action.

Authoritative British sources reported today that Bevin is much less firm than Sir Stafford in opposing devaluation.

Government officials here no longer reject devaluation with the same emphasis they did a few weeks ago. They indicate strongly the Government might be willing to make a deal, accepting devaluation for a general adjustment of many European currencies and a United States agreement to raise the price of gold.

Heavy London Selling Lowers British Bonds

London, Aug. 17 (AP).—British government bonds were subjected to heavy selling on the London Stock Exchange today. Some issues closed as much as 15 shillings ($3) lower.

Brokers cited these two main reasons for the selling wave:

Reds Capture Foochow, Aim At Formosa

Hongkong, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—The Nationalist government today admitted the Communist capture of Foochow, main debarkation point for troops and supplies from Formosa.

A dispatch from Nationalist headquarters on Formosa said the Nationalists had ordered the withdrawal of defense forces to an undisclosed destination. Government headquarters at Foochow moved yesterday to Pingtan Island, 50 miles to the southeast.

The Communists appeared to be trying to consolidate the area for a future attack on Formosa itself.

Nationalist officials denied the Communists had crossed the border into Kwangtung, of which Canton is the capital, but other advices indicated the Red armies had bypassed some of the Nationalist defenses and turned east toward Tingnan, 140 miles from Canton.

Enlarged Gland Suffocates Infant In Silver Spring

Suffocation caused by an enlarged thymus gland claimed the life of a 6½-month-old baby yesterday in Silver Spring.

The infant, Lawrence A. Widmayer 3d, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence A. Widmayer, 9005 Sudbury rd., Silver Spring, was found dead in his crib yesterday morning.

Dr. F. J. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, said the gland, which normally disappears during puberty, was swollen four times the normal size, an autopsy revealed.

The ballooned gland cut off breathing, he said.

Crippled Girl's Brace Stolen, Returned

Detroit, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—Pretty Sally Porrett was heart broken when a specially designed brace which would permit her to be freed from a heavy leg cast was stolen from her father's car.

But a chance discovery by two small boys tonight brought happiness to the girl.

Two tots found the brace on a weed-covered lot and it was taken to the Porrett home.

7 Area Polio Cases Reported; 2 Soldiers in D. C. Stricken

Three new polio cases reported yesterday in the District and four in surrounding communities brought the total for the year to 86 in Greater Washington.

Two of the District cases were members of the Army, one 20 years old and one 40, admitted to Walter Reed Hospital from separate Army installations and barracks. The third District case was an 18-year-old youth of the 1200 block of 28th st. nw., admitted to Gallinger Hospital yesterday.

Prince Georges County health authorities reported two cases. They were a 10-year-old boy of the 400 block of Lincoln ave., Takoma Park, admitted to Children's Hospital last Thursday; and a male from the 4500 block of Woodberry rd., Riverdale. Onset of the latter case was two months ago and health authorities had no further details on it yesterday.

In Montgomery County, a 34-year-old man of the 200 block of Flak st., Silver Spring, was admitted to Mount Alto Hospital, Sunday.

Fairfax County authorities reported a 34-year-old farmer of the vicinity of Vienna, Va., was stricken with polio and taken to Gallinger Hospital.

In that county, an unusual case of Rocky Mountain spotted fever also was reported. A 34-year-old man who lives near Burke, Va., became ill after removing ticks from his dog, though he had none on himself, according to Dr. H. C. Bradford, Fairfax County health officer. He was admitted to Arlington Hospital.

U. S. Payroll Tieup Ended By Congress

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Averting the threat of payless paydays, Congress yesterday voted funds until September 15 for Government agencies employing some 2,500,000 military and civilian personnel.

The resolution cutting the tie-up of Federal funds involved in unpassed appropriation measures was acted on first by the House, and then, in short order, by the Senate. It requires only the President's signature to become law, and no White House delay is expected.

House approval of the extension measure was made possible by a resort to a parliamentary device not used since 1946.

Under the rules of the House, the resolution normally would require either a two-thirds vote or approval of a special rule by the Rules Committee.

On Calendar Wednesday

Both of these avenues had previously been closed. But under House Rules, a legislative committee may bring up a resolution on Calendar Wednesday which can be enacted by a simple majority, without Rules Committee clearance.

Normally Calendar Wednesdays are passed over, but yesterday speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.) called for reports from legislative committees.

Promptly Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) of the Appropriations Committee, who wrote the authoritative manual on House procedure, introduced the extension resolution.

Mollifying opponents of an indefinite extension of agency spending authority, Cannon introduced an amendment placing a time limit of September 15 on the resolution.

A second amendment, sponsored by Representative John Taber (R., N. Y.), had the effect of knocking out an authorization to continue spending certain funds for Korea.

Cannon said the action would cut off funds, at least temporarily, for 180 American Government employes in Korea. Taber objected to this section on the ground it by-passed congressional action and allowed the Budget Bureau estimate to prevail without congressional approval.

The amendment was passed 213 to 115.

Reported to Senate

As soon as the House acted, the Senate Appropriations Committee went into a hasty session, and reported the resolution to the Senate.

Cannon has called the appropriations log-jam the worst in congressional history, and has blamed both Senate delays and GOP partisanship in the House for its occurrence.

The stopgap resolution is the third adopted this year. Cannon said this is the first time in history that a third resolution has been necessary. The House cleared its appropriations measures in record time this year, but the Senate has failed to act on some, and others are held up in conference of the two bodies.

As soon as the Appropriations Committee resolution had been reported, Representative Percy Priest (D., Tenn.), House Democratic whip, moved that other committee reports on calendar Wednesday be omitted. Only Representative Vito Marcantonio (AL., N. Y.) objected, and the smooth functioning House leadership team had the desired resolution on the floor.

Before the resolution was passed Paul G. Hoffman, Economic Cooperation Administrator, had already called a halt on further outlay of Marshall Plan funds for Europe.

Connie had her trousseau all picked out.

Plans for the wedding trip were made. The minister, an old friend of the family, had been consulted.

The wedding invitations would be ordered as soon as Ed had his divorce.

But Ed never got his divorce. The marriage never took place.

Of all the U. M. cases in the book, this is one of the saddest.

It started in Washington. Connie was 22 when she came here from a North Carolina town to take a job in the Government. She was a typical G-girl. She shared an apartment with another girl, had a P-1 rating.

Soon after she had settled into a regular routine she met Ed. He was an Army officer. He was getting a divorce from his wife.

So far as Connie was concerned, Ed was her future. He felt the same way. Ed's wife had agreed to the divorce, and the papers had already started through the mill.

After Connie and Ed had been going together for several months, she took him down to North Carolina to meet her people. They liked him; he liked them. The whole town approved her choice.

Finally, Ed's lawyer told him the divorce would be "through," he thought, in another month. Connie made wedding preparations.

Gen. Vaughan 'Pressured' Him On Behalf of Molasses Firm, Former U. S. Official Testifies

Job Agencies Shifted to Labor Dept.

(Roll Call Vote on Page 11)

By a vote of 57 to 32 the Senate yesterday approved President Truman's Reorganization Plan No. 2, designed to shift Federal job-finding and unemployment insurance services from the Federal Security Agency to the Labor Department.

The House already has approved the plan, and under the reorganization law, it becomes effective at midnight Friday.

Secretary of Labor Tobin last night hailed the switch of the employment offices to "where they belong" and said his department already is taking steps to find "jobs for men and women, and men and women for jobs."

Two Oppose Shift

Tobin said that more must be done to carry out the President's wish to "rebuild the department to its greatest usefulness." He said steps soon will be taken to have other functions now outside the department returned to it, including those recommended by the Hoover Commission.

Under Reorganization Plan No. 2 the Veterans Placement Service Board was abolished and its duties given to the Labor Department. This was in addition to the transfer of the United States Employment Service and the Unemployment Compensation Office to the department.

An hour after passing the second reorganization plan, the Senate approved, 47 to 40, Plan No. 7—a proposal transferring the Bureau of Public Roads from the Federal Works Agency to the Department of Commerce.

Senators Hayden (D., Ariz.) and Cordon (R., Oreg.) opposed this plan on the ground public roads should go to a construction, not a transportation, agency.

Four other reorganization plans submitted by Mr. Truman are almost certain to become law since there has been no evidence of an attempt to veto them in Congress.

These provide for tightening up the administration of the Postoffice Department, Maritime Commission and Civil Service Commission and for transferring the National Security Council and National Security Resources Board to the Office of the President.

Morse Lauds Truman

Reorganization Plan No. 2 and Reorganization plan No. 1, overwhelmingly rejected by the Senate Tuesday, were the two most controversial plans to be submitted so far. Plan No. 1 would have changed the Federal Security Agency into a Department of Welfare with cabinet status.

Senator Morse (R., Oreg.), who opposed the plan, said yesterday in supporting the second plan that President Truman had earned the thanks of the Nation in his efforts to make the Government more efficient.

McCarthy Asks U. S. Indictment Of Maragon on Perjury Charge

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

The story of the friendship between Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, White House military aide, and John Maragon, man of many jobs, began to unfold on Capitol Hill yesterday.

A former minor official of the Department of Agriculture, testifying at the Senate's investigation of 5-percenters, told how General Vaughan called him up in November, 1946, on behalf of Maragon's client and implied that he could "help" him—or could "get" his job.

Herbert C. Hathorn, the witness, also quoted General Vaughan as saying:

'Well, we Democrats have to stick together."

Schlitz Party Recalled

The day's testimony began with an account of General Vaughan and Maragon attending a party at the Schlitz Brewery in Milwaukee, Wis.

It ended with a word picture of Maragon as a White House habitue, using General Vaughan's office to make and receive telephone calls. All this, two of the witnesses said, led them to believe that Maragon was Vaughan's "assistant," or "liaison" or "leg man."

Senator McCarthy (R., Wisc.) demanded that the Department of Justice seek Maragon's indictment for perjury. It had been brought out that Maragon, testifying behind closed doors on July 28, stated that he had never been paid for doing any business with the Government—a statement that was exploded by yesterday's witnesses, who told of paying him a total of $1318 to intervene with the Department of Agriculture.

Senator Mundt (R., S. Dak.) accused General Vaughan of using pressure and intimidation to help Maragon in his role of "fixer," and said he had revised his opinion of the White House military aide.

"Finagling Bargainer"

He said that whereas he once regarded Vaughan as merely a "bungling fumbler," he had been forced by the testimony to conclude that he was a "finagling bargainer."

Senator Hoey (D., N.C.), chairman of the subcommittee investigating the 5-percenters or influence peddlers, rebuked Mundt for his harsh comments, and suggested that judgment ought to be withheld until General Vaughan has had a chance to testify and all the evidence is in.

When the hearing ended yesterday, Chairman Hoey said the subcommittee would take a recess until Tuesday. Then, he said, he would begin calling General Vaughan, Maragon, James V. Hunt, and Maj. Gen. Herman Feldman, suspended Quartermaster General.

Rent Controls In One-Third Of Area to Go

Cleveland, Aug. 17 (AP).—Federal rent controls will be lifted by October 1 in one-third of the area they are now effective, Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods announced today.

He said a cut in the Congressional appropriation for his office budget forced the move.

Communities of more than 100,000 probably will not be affected by the cut, and areas in which military establishments are located will remain under control, Woods said.

About 1000 counties now are under rent ceilings which are effective until next June 30, Woods said. Up to 350 of these will be freed of the ceilings within the next four to six weeks.

To Free Smallest Areas First

Half of the areas to be removed from control will be listed "within a week or 10 days," Woods said, and the rest will be announced in a second list sometime before October 1.

The housing expediter and his top regional advisers will meet in Washington Thursday to discuss the first list, he said.

"We will look at the smallest and least populated areas first and gradually go into larger communities as he have to," Woods explained.

The decontrolling will not be done, in all instances, by areas, Woods explained.

"If any of the decontrolled areas get out of line," Woods warned, "we will come right back in."

Sand Workers' Wage Parley Proves Vain

Another wage negotiating session between the Smoot Sand and Gravel Co. and representatives of its 175 employes last night ended without agreement and left open the possibility of a strike call next Monday.

The company supplies a large percentage of the sand and gravel used in local construction and paving projects, and a strike could tie up much current work, especially jobs in the early stages.

Federal Mediator Richard Goodrick, who sat in on last night's session at the Smoot offices, 3020 K st. nw., said the company made some offers but none were acceptable to the union and the meeting ended with "nothing accomplished."

Goodrick said every effort would be made to bring the two parties together again before the week's end, but no new meetings had been set as of last night.

The unions involved are Local 77, International Union of Operating Engineers (AFL), whose members operate barges and tugs as well as steam shovels, cranes and other stationary engines, and Local 639, Teamsters Union (AFL), including maintenance and rivermen.

The unions have been asking 25 cents an hour increase over their present contract, which expires Monday. The company had not offered any wage increase.

Union meetings will be held Friday and Saturday to consider any offers the company may make, and members are expected to vote for a Monday strike if a satisfactory agreement is not reached by that time, a spokesman said.

Dollar Aid for Development To Be Ready Soon, Says Krug

By John G. Rogers

Lake Success, Aug. 17.—Scientists and experts from 50 countries were assured today by Interior Secretary J. A. Krug that United States dollars in substantial amounts will be ready soon to assist the world in conservation and development to insure peace by diminishing want.

Krug told the opening session of the United Nations Scientific Conference on the Conservation and Utilization of Resources he spoke for President Truman in asserting American determination to help needy countries to help themselves to develop their potential wealth.

The U. N. conference, boycotted by Russia and all Slav states except Yugoslavia, is expected to present discussion by nearly 750 experts for three weeks on every aspect of the world's resources, except one. The exception is atomic energy, a subject which the United States withdrew from the agenda.

The theme of the conference is a plundered planet whose resources some day will vanish unless men use them more wisely. The object is to make possible a great mass exchange of know-how to give international stimulation to conservation and development.

What amounted to a keynote speech today was made by Fairfield Osborn of New York, president of the Conservation Foundation.

Other speakers were U. N. Secretary General Trygve Lie and Dr. Detlev Bronk, president of Johns Hopkins University and chairman of the National Research Council.

7 Die in Chile Rioting Blamed On Communists

Santiago, Chile, Aug. 17 (AP).—Seven persons were killed in rioting in downtown Santiago today and congress was called into special session tonight to hear a cabinet request for extraordinary powers to cope with the situation.

The government said the rioting was inspired by Communists.

The cabinet said it wanted the added powers — including press and radio censorship—in order to meet a "revolutionary plot" inspired by the Communists and opposition groups.

The rioting started yesterday. It was witnessed by Arthur Godfrey, American radio star, and Eddie Rickenbacker, United States aviation executive.

The rioting stemmed from an increase in bus fares amounting to about 3 cents.

President Gabriel Gonzalez Videla sped to Santiago to preside over the cabinet meeting.

Final House Vote On Arms Due Soon

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Attacked from several sides, the Administration's $1,450,000,000 arms aid plan yesterday moved to an early House vote with Democratic leaders confidently forecasting its approval without major change.

General debate on the measure ended last night, with numerous protests that the House was getting insufficient time to consider a program of such significance.

Amendments will be considered today, with some possibility that final House action may come tonight.

Centers of Opposition

Floor opposition was centered on the following moves, apparently in decreasing order of support:

1. An attempt to cut in half the proposed $1,160,490,000 in military aid for western European members of the North Atlantic treaty, or reduce that figure by a lesser amount.

Leading this drive are two prominent members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, which reported the bill, Representatives James P. Richards (D., S. C.) and John M. Vorys (R., Ohio).

2. An effort to add to the bill 200 million dollars in new military aid for Chinese forces opposing communism, with the arms to be used under American supervision.

Three members of the House committee, with other substantial support, are directing this move—Vorys and Representatives Walter H. Judd (R., Minn.) and John Davis Lodge (R., Conn.).

3. A call to abandon attempts to bolster Europe's ground forces, concentrating instead on "strategically based" air power, with friendly nations supplying essential overseas air bases.

Three other House Foreign Affairs members—Representatives Robert B. Chiperfield (R., Ill.), Lawrence H. Smith (R. Wis.) and Donald L. Jackson R., Calif.), lead this proopsal.

4. Apparently scattered opposition to any form of mutual military aid plan.

Principle Accepted

Meager outright opposition to the arms program principle was seen in the first House vote on the legislation—275 to 47 on the question of taking it up at this time.

Voting against the rule to consider the bill were 39 Republicans; Representative Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.), and seven Democrats: Morris (Okla.), Rankin (Miss.), Sadowski (Mich.), Secrest (Ohio), Williams (Miss.), Tackett (Ark.) and White (Calif.).

The joint Senate Foreign Relations-Armed Services Committee, which yesterday reopened its hearings on the arms plan, heard Socialist leader Norman Thomas urge a new effort to secure disarmament through the United Nations.

Action on military aid and the "ghastly arms race," should be suspended, he pleaded, until a new, strong effort in the U. N. is made "to bring about universal disarmament under effective international controls and with international provision for security."

There is no immediate danger of war, he said, nor is the present bill "well devised."

Sees 'Economic Drain'

"In the months that would be consumed by the appeal which I seek," Thomas declared, "progress could be made on that unified plan only for defense without which the Atlantic pact will be an economic drain on the American people and a potential threat to peace."

He said he believed the arms bill would be greatly improved by amendments offered by Senators Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and Dulles (R., N. Y.) to tie it in closely to the Atlantic pact, but he still urged postponing action on it.

"In general I find myself in substantial sympathy with your approach," Senator Vandenberg told him, "but I can't agree with your timetable."

Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.) said he agreed with Thomas' view but Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) indicated he had no trust in any disarmament plan Russia would accept.

Leading the Administration fight in the House for approval of the full arms bill, House Foreign Affairs Chairman Kee (W., Va.) said Russia had 200 divisions at the close of World War II and "today she still has 200," for she created new ones while discharging others.

'Mighties Army Ever Known'

Russia "is maintaining at this moment the mightiest army the world has ever known," Kee declared, and they are not there "for the purpose of parades."

Without power to resist her encroachment, he said, "the free nations of Europe will one by one be certainly the victims of this rapacious and inhuman monster."

"This is an insane program," cried Representative Marcantonio, "and it is a program for war . . . If this insane policy is not stopped, next we'll be using men" in addition to providing arms.

Representative Morris termed the plan "one of the most dangerous things we could do, one of the most unnecessary things we could do . . . Communism was on the run long before the Marshall Plan . . . Communism stopped itself."

Representative Smith (R., Wis.) in opposing the program, disclosed estimates of Russia's armed strength that are not generally known, although he said they are "public information" despite the fact they were secretly presented to the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Presents 'Facts'

These facts, he said, were presented to "radio listeners" the day after they were given to the committee:

"The Red Army has about 50 divisions along the western front from Finland to Turkey. This means about 750,000 men.

"Another 150 divisions or another 2,250,000 men are in reserve. It is the opinion of military experts that if Russia declared war today, the Red army would control all of Europe and the Middle East in 90 days, by virtue of its mass army.

"It is reported that 5000 of the Soviet air fleet of 19,000 planes are troop carriers and they could drop 75,000 men in England at one time."

Europe, he said, could not survive the devastation of ground warfare, "but Europe might survive occupation."

This is a "frightening situation," he said, but "we must face the facts . . . and admit that there is not much that we can do about Europe in case of attack," but concentrate "on our defenses at home" and air power.

The arms plan, he charged also violates the United Nations Charter, for which it is "the kiss of death."

Herter 'Very Disturbed'

Representative Herter (R., Mass.) said he was "very disturbed" by the division of views within the House Foreign Affairs Committee. He criticized parts of the bill, but termed the principle "a calculated risk . . . which I believe we should take . . ."

Rep. Cox (D., Ga.) who has frequently opposed the Administration, said that while he has little faith in the State Department's views, he supports the program to check Russia's desire "to rule the whole world." The plan should not be opposed, he said, merely because the State Department favors it.

The joint Senate committee will continue its hearings on the bill at 10:30 a. m., today, as the House resumes its debate.

Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson met privately with the Senate committee for an hour yesterday to discuss what portions of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's reports on the Far East military situation can be made public, to answer demands of Senators seeking further aid for Nationalist China. MacArthur has declined an invitation to testify in person.

Small Steel Firms Issue Poverty Plea

New York, Aug. 17 (U.P.)—Seven small steel companies today asked President Truman's fact-finding board to exclude them from its recommendations for settling the steel dispute because they can't afford to grant wage increases.

Executives of the companies asked the three-man board to consider their cases separately. The board will report to the President its suggestions for settling the dispute between 58 steel companies and the United Steelworkers of America (CIO).

The union is demanding a fourth-round wage increase of 30 cents an hour. The hearings are expected to end on August 26, which would give the board only four days to report back to Mr. Truman.

The small companies said they could not stand the losses that would result from granting the union's demands. Some said they were making little profit and would go broke if they had to meet the union's demands.

The seven companies were: Babcock & Wilcox Tube Co., of Beaver Falls, Pa.; Firth Sterling Steel & Carbide Corp., of McKeesport, Pa.; American Chain & Cable Co.'s Page Steel and Wire Division at Monessen, Pa.; Blaw-Knox Co., of Pittsburgh; Latrobe Electric Steel Co., of Latrobe, Pa.; Follansbee Steel Corp., and Wheeling Steel Co.

During the morning session the Inland Steel Co. charged that outside influence had crushed its "real and honest" negotiations with the steelworkers.

Edward L. Ryerson, Inland board chairman, demanded that the company be allowed to return to direct "good faith" bargaining rather than accept the rulings of the Presidential fact finding board.

Pork Expected To Be Cheaper In Ten Days

Chicago, Aug. 17 (U.P.)—Cheaper pork can be expected in the Nation's butcher shops in about 10 days, a spokesman for the American Meat Institute said today.

He said competition from pork may force beef prices down, too.

The National Retail Grocers Association said now is the time for housewives to enjoy fresh fruits and vegetables, on which prices are at the lowest point of the summer.

Prospects for lower retail prices on pork arose when a bumper spring pig crop, 15 per cent larger than last year's, began reaching the Midwest livestock market.

Hog prices dipped to as low as $20 a hundred pounds yesterday, more than $10 under the price at this time last year, as supplies flowed to Cornbelt terminals.

Nevertheless, market experts expected seasonal influx of the spring crop to mount in the weeks ahead and prices to dip still further.

B-36 Probers on Coast Call Renegotiation Charge Untrue

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Los Angeles, Aug. 17.—House investigators today ran down one of the charges in the mysterious anonymous document in the B-36 probe and pronounced it "totally unfounded."

During three hours of questioning of top West Coast aircraft makers, they also failed to produce any evidence of an alleged plot by Consolidated-Vultee Chairman Floyd Odlum and Air Force Secretary W. Stuart Symington to create a "General Motors of the air."

The charge the probers said they had definitely "nailed" also concerned Symington. It dealt with reported renegotiation of a contract held by a company formerly headed by the Air Secretary and a palatial $85,000 Beverly Hills home.

According to the anonymous document, Colonel Frank Wolfe, USAF, retired, bought the mansion after renegotiating the contract without loss to Symington's company.

House investigators today took a look at Wolfe's home—and it turned out to be a $50-a-month flat "on the wrong side of the railroad tracks" in Beverly Hills.

Facts As Developed

Further, they said, Wolfe retired during rather than after the war—when the renegotiation was said to have occurred—and was an engineer not involved in contract work.

The anonymous document declared that the Emerson Electric Co. of St. Louis, formerly headed by Symington, had built a number of airplane turrets that were defective.

It said the Government was entitled to be reimbursed, but that Wolfe—"a subordinate of Gen. Benny Myers"—renegotiated the matter with no loss to Emerson. Then it mentioned Wolfe's expensive home in Beverly Hills—home of movie stars.

House Armed Services Committee Counsel Joseph Keenan, declaring his inquiry is directed at comparing the statements in the document "with the facts as developed," commented:

"The palatial $85,000 residence of the retired colonel turns out to be a $50-a-month rented flat in a four-suite apartment house."

He said the investigators had been unable to find any record of Wolfe's being concerned with any Emerson Co. renegotiation during or after the war.

'Their Eyes Popped'

House Subcommittee Chairman Mel Price (D., Ill.), who looked over Wolfe's home with Keenan, committeemen and this reported commented:

"When members of the committee heard the charge linking Symington and Wolfe their eyes popped. This looked like the key to the matter. Now the charge turns out to be totally unfounded."

The Beverly Hills house is a green and white brick, four-family house in a section of Beverly Hills not inhabited by the movie stars. Across the street is a public playground.

The House committeemen also began taking testimony of West Coast kingpins of the aviation industry, but beyond revelation of an offer by Curtiss Wright last year to merge with Boeing, learned little new on the alleged aircraft combine.

William M. Allen, president of Boeing, said he turned down a proposal of Curtiss-Wright to merge the two companies and declared he never had heard of the "General Motors of the Air" proposal.

Has "No Complaints"

President John K. Northrop of Northrop Aircraft Co., told the subcommittee he had "no complaint" over two Air Force decisions affecting his company. One subcontracted most of an order for Northrop B-39 Flying Wings to Consolidated-Vultee, he agreed Northrop could not handle the order. The other canceled the entire B-49 contract to permit the Air Force to build more B-36s.

Northrop said a statement that his company had been warned of Air Force reprisals if they did not merge with Convair was a "false statement."

The builder of the revolutionary Flying Wing told the subcommittee that a new "turbodyne" engine to be installed in the B-49 will make it an "intercontinental bomber" capable of carrying a 10,000-pound bomb on a 10,000-mile mission. He said such a long-range B-49 could be ready in two years.

Slater Heads Export Lines

John E. Slater of Essex Falls, N. J., executive vice president of American Export Lines, yesterday was elected president of the company, it was announced in New York.

Slater, who has been with the firm since 1934 as a director, succeeds William H. Coverdale, who died August 10.

Joseph A. Thomas of New York was elected chairman of the board, a position also left vacant by Coverdale's death. John F. Gehan, vice president of the company, and Miles Coverdale Kennedy, partner of Coverdale and Colpitts, consulting engineers, were elected to board membership. Both live in New York.

Bridges Would Shift Strike Talks to D. C.

Honolulu, Aug. 17 (AP).—Harry Bridges today proposed negotiations in Washington if necessary to end Hawaii's 109-day dock strike. He reported no progress in new peace talks.

An employer spokesman told newsmen the head of the striking CIO International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union appeared to be playing for time in order to bring Federal mediation.

An agreement to resume negotiations, signed yesterday, provided that Cyrus S. Ching, chief of the United States Concillation Service, would be called in if no progress is made within three days.

Might Not Make Trip

Ching said in Washington he might be unable to come here. Bridges then issued a statement saying he was willing to carry the negotiations to Washington if Ching must stay there.

The employer spokesman said he assumed the employers would stick to the position, announced previously, that Hawaii was the place to negotiate.

A union spokesman said Bridges had receded from his original request that struck stevedoring companies guarantee not to hire "strike-breaking" government and non-union longshoremen.

Bridges made no mention of this. The employer spokesman said only that there was no agreement yet on the question.

The question of hiring non-union longshoremen after settlement of the strike was one of two explosive issues threatening the new peace talks.

The other arose when Bridges declared that negotiations would be interrupted if the territory prosecutes him for contempt.

Attorney General Walter D. Ackerman, jr., who was preparing a contempt action because Bridges defied a no-picketing injunction, has filed nothing in court.

Circuit Court Judge Edward A. Towse asked Ackerman to start action against Bridges by noon. The hour passed. Towse said it was mandatory under the dock seizure law for the attorney general "to proceed and file appropriate proceedings."

VFW Seeks Cannon For Salute to Truman

Miami, Fla., Aug. 17 (U.P.)—The Veterans of Foreign Wars were in the market today for a cannon to fire a 21-gun saluate for President Truman on his arrival at the VFW convention here Monday.

It seems that cannons are scarce in Miami and the VFW is in a tizzy because the American Legion had two howitzers to greet Mr. Truman when he flew here for its convention a year ago.

Coalition in Belgium Gets Confidence Vote

Brussels, Aug. 17 (U.P.)—The new coalition government of Social Christians (Catholics) and Liberals (Conservatives) under Premier Gaston Eyskens won a vote of confidence in the Belgium House of Representatives today, 125 to 64.

'Voice' Jam Protest Is Made to Stalin

Acheson Warns

Don't Abuse Liberty, U. S. TellsGermans

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The United States has protested directly to Premier Stalin on Soviet jamming of the Voice of America, and the long delay in settling for lend-lease, Secretary of State Acheson said yesterday.

Acheson told a news conference Ambassador Alan G. Kirk brought up those two questions at his first interview with Stalin.

He said the Soviet Premier received Kirk in a courteous and friendly manner, but made no special comment on either question. Kirk reported that they were referred by Stalin to the Russian Foreign Office.

Radio Jamming Scored

At the same time, Acheson released a statement in which Soviet jamming of U. S. broadcasts was roundly denounced. He said the State Department would throw reinforcements into its effort to reach the Russian people if Congress would grant necessary funds.

In that connection, Acheson noted that the House Appropriations Comittee had approved Tuesday an additional $11,320,000 for improved facilities to overcome Russian jamming. That sum if finally made available would, he added, "go a long way" toward overcoming interference.

(The Soviet Embassy, in its "USSR Information Bulletin" published here, regularly advertises Soviet shortwave broadcasts in English beamed to the United States.—Editor's Note.)

Russian jamming of Voice programs, Acheson recalled, was started four months ago. He added that more than 250 jamming transmitters had been identified by Western Power detectors, and others were believed to be in operation.

"It is now obvious," he said, "that setting up this complex, costly, jamming operation took many months of careful planning, and that it must be looked upon as a long-range plan of the USSR for isolating the Russion people even more completely from access to truth and fact about the outside world."

The appropriation approved by the House committee, he said, if voted by Congress, would be spent on new broadcasting equipment which would do much to overcome this jamming.

While in no way minimizing the importance of the two questions laid before Stalin by Kirk, Department officials expressed doubt that the protest would achieve real results, since they believe isolation of the Russian people from outside ideas is fundamental Soviet policy.

However, they felt Kirk had at least left a couple of ideas for the Kremlin to consider as possible points of departure for removal of some of the many irritants in dealings between Russia and the United States.

Status of Lend-Lease

Acheson pointed out at his conference that the lend-lease negotiations had been dragged along since the end of the war, with no appreciable progress. The net result so far, he said, has been to start a survey on the return of 3 ice-breakers and 28 frigates lent Russia to help open the Murmansk route. This, he conceded, was a very minor phase of the whole 11-billion-dollar lend-lease transaction.

Russia would be very little out of pocket, since the United States seeks return only of equipment not lost in the war. Settlement has been prevented by Russia's refusal to supply an inventory of returnable material.

Britain Said to Beat Reds 'Radio Jamming'

London, Aug. 17 (AP).—New and top-secret electronic devices have enabled British radio engineers to break through Russian jamming of British broadcasts, it was reported today.

British technicians who successfully jammed Nazi broadcasts for almost five years have literaly "cleared" the air over portions of central Europe, informants said.

Gen. Chidlaw Is Named for High AF Post

President Truman yesterday nominated Lieut. Gen. Benjamin Wiley Chidlaw to be commanding general of the Air Materiel Command of the Air Force.

Gen. Chidlaw

Chidlaw has been deputy chief of the Air Force Materiel Command at Dayton, Ohio, as top commander, he succeeds Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, who last week was appointed to head the Defense Department's new National Defense Management Committee.

Chidlaw is rated a command pilot and combat observer. He has nearly 6000 flying hours, including numerous combat missions over Europe in the last year.

He was born at Cleves, Ohio, and is now 49 years old. His wife, the former Miss Lillian Marie Braun, is from Cincinnati. They have one son, Ben Evan Chidlaw, who was in the Air Force in the last war and now is a student at Harvard.

Truman Talks With McGrath's Likely Successor

President Truman yesterday went over plans for next week's Democratic National Committee meeting with the man expected to become the new chairman—William Boyle, the party's chief patronage dispenser.

The meeting has been called to name a successor to Senator McGrath (D., R. I.), who has been appointed United States Attorney General. Boyle, now executive vice chairman, is considered the logical choice.

He would not comment on reports his selection is "assured," saying it is up to the committee.

Boyle said the President has been invited to a reception for members of the committee at the Mayflower Hotel Wednesday night. The meeting has been called for Wednesday morning.

Thief Steals Her Joy . . .

BRACE GONE, SHE CAN'T WALK—Seven-year-old Sally Porret, shown with her mother, Mrs. Edward J. Porrett, of Detroit, would have walked yesterday for the first time in her life. But she couldn't because a thief stole her leg brace from her father's auto. Sally, crippled by spastic paralysis since birth, gazes sadly at the leg-cast which was to have been removed and replaced by the brace that would permit her to walk. It will take several weeks to have another one made and Sally, whose blue eyes were once aglow with excitement, will have to wait some more before she can walk like other children

Beran Breaks Long Silence, Charges He Is Held Captive

Prague, Aug. 17 (AP).—Archbishop Josef Beran today broke a two months' silence and accused the Communist Government of Czechoslovakia of holding him captive in violation of his constitutional rights.

The stocky little 60-year-old Roman Catholic primate has not appeared in public since June 19 when a sermon he tried to preach was shouted down by Communist hecklers. He contends he has been interned and isolated in his Prague palace.

Archbishop Beran accused the Government of illegally seizing his consistory (administrative office) and confiscating the funds of his Prague diocese.

Reports Earlier Complaints

He made the charges in a letter to the State Procurator (Prosecutor). The letter was given to the foreign press through church and diplomatic channels. In his letter, the country's leading Catholic asked bluntly:

"Is the Roman Catholic Church in Czechoslovakia still recognized by the state? If so, by what law was the Roman Catholic Church deprived of its legal independence in internal matters?"

Archbishop Beran's questions and charges indicated the church might be trying to force a break in the deadlocked church-state fight.

The Communist-Controlled Prague press repeatedly has claimed the Archbishop was free to leave his palace but wanted to remain in seclusion and "pose as a martyr."

Archbishop Beran declared that during his weeks in seclusion he received no answers to complaints to Government Ministries and virtually no mail. He said he had complained to the Ministry of Interior, the Ministry of Education and other state agencies about what he considered were violations of his own and the church's rights.

"I am forced to turn to the State Procurator," he wrote "(since) it is impossible for me to confer with a legal representative—no one is permitted to visit me—and then, too, all (lawyers) are afraid that they would lose their practice if they wished to protect my interests."

The Catholic leader charged that Dr. Miroslav Houska, an official of the Ministry of Education, has been installed in his palace consistory and is "acting in the name of the Archbishop and the diocese."

Swimmer Resuscitated After 45 Minutes Work

Ocean City, Md., Aug. 17 (AP).—A Baltimore swimmer was pulled unconscious from the surf here yesterday, and it was 45 minutes before he recovered consciousness.

The man, Lloyd K. Ewes, 27, was brought in by an unidentified lifeguard from the surf off Maridel beach. John E. Quillen of the Ocean City Fire Department finally brought him around with a respirator.

Lifeguards have rescued more than 25 swimmers along the beaches here since Saturday. Northwest winds have resulted in a dangerous undertow and a rough surf.

Polish Consul Quits; Seeks Asylum in U. S.

By the United Press

Tadeusz J. Rakowski, Poland's consul general in Montreal, resigned yesterday and asked for political asylum in the United States.

"I am a Catholic and I cannot accept the onslaughts of the Communist government upon the Catholic Church," he said.

His decision was disclosed here by Arthur Bliss Lane, former U. S. Ambassador to Poland.

Lane said he put Rakowski in touch with State and Justice Department officials. He was confident the request for asylum would be granted. He said Rakowski now is in this country with his wife and daughter and plans to live with friends in Los Angeles.

Rakowski, who was a member of the Polish underground during the war, joined the Polish government as secretary to the Foreign Minister in 1945.

In a statement issued by Lane, Rakowski said:

"I would like to remain in this country . . . until the political situation of my homeland is changed and I will try to work . . . for the return of freedom and independence to my country and toward the enlightenment of the American people about the deadly danger of communism.

He said the Polish government "does not act for the good of the country but in the interest of and according to directives received from a foreign power—Russia."

Lane said Rakowski came here while on leave for the express purpose of resigning. He said his resignation was cabled to Warsaw yesterday.

Seven-Week Australian Coal Mine Strike Ends

Canberra, Australia, Aug. 17 (AP). The government announced today the seven-week general coal mine strike which brought hardship to Australia in her severe winter now is officially at an end.

The miners started back to work Monday. Their demands for a shorter work week and higher pay have gone to arbitration.

New Regime To Keep Syria Foreign Pacts

Damascus, Syria, Aug. 17 (U.P.) Foreign Minister Nazem el Kodsy said today his government would respect all international agreements made before the new regime seized power early Monday.

His statement was interpreted as meaning the new regime would honor agreements to permit American and British-owned oil companies to construct pipe lines from Iran and Saudi Arabia across Syria to key Mediterranean ports.

These agreements were made by the late President Hossni Zaim who was tried and shot to death Monday.

Pope Says Church Now Calm

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, Aug. 17 (AP).—Pope Pius XII, apparently referring to excommunication of militant Communists, today said it has made the Catholic Church feel calm and serene internally.

As usual, the Pontiff refrained from mentioning communism by name.

"There are few times in history," he said, "that the church has felt as calm and serene internally as she has since her maternal voice resounded all over the world and since her children, through the echo that these words have made in their intelligence, hearts and consciences, must decide, because if they (the words) admonish they are also inspired only by love and the desire for their salvation."

These words, the Pontiff said, "have shown the necessary division between the field of Jesus Christ and that of His enemies."

The Pontiff spoke in reply to a greeting by Felipe S. Portocarrero, new Peruvian Ambassador to the Holy Sea.

Senate Group Approves Bill Authorizing 70 Air Groups

By the United Press

The Senate Armed Services Committee yesterday disregarded President Truman's budget recommendations and unanimously approved a bill authorizing the Air Force to continue building toward 70-group strength.

But it struck from the House-approved measure language which made 70 groups mandatory. The committee said that as long as the bill supplied the necessary planes and men to make up that strength there was no need to place a specific "limitation" on expansion of the service.

The measure calls for an Air Force of 502,000 officers and men, preset manpower ceiling, and 24,000 planes. The bill also freezes the Army's present manpower ceiling of 837,000 officers and men.

The key item stricken by the committee was authorized for purchase of 5200 aircraft. This means the Air Force will have to get along with some of its present planes and replace them more slowly than it had hoped.

The committee also cut back the National Gard authorization from 750,000 to 600,000 officers and men. It also eliminated authorization for an organized reserve corps of 980,000 officers and men and said the corps should consist of such personnel "as is necessary to form the basis for complete and immediate mobilization."

U. S. Canton Offices To Go to Chungking

Canton, Aug. 17 (AP).—The United States Consulate General expects to close by Friday and join the exodus to a new refugee capital at Chungking.

Responsible Chinese sources said 10,000 government employes and dependents already have moved to Chungking, 600 miles northwest.

Latest reports had put the Reds little more than 155 miles from Canton.

THEY ALL WANT JUDY—Four-year-old Judy Ann Rouff displays her pigtails in a Boston court, where she is the center of a three-way custody battle. Three homes want Judy—Chinese Laundryman Jack Ho, 35, and his white wife, Berthilde; Judy's mother, Mrs. Dora C. Rouff, 24; and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Donnelley of Burrillville, R. I., who already have adopted Judy's sister. The Hos have petitioned to keep Judy, who speaks both English and Chinese. They said they had her for two years and then the mother decided to take her away. A judge will talk to Judy today before deciding. Meanwhile, she was allowed to go home with her Chinese "daddy"

Maragon Also Had Traffic Woes, Police Records Show

An investigator for the Senate committee investigating "5-per-centers" yesterday began checking into the local traffic record of John Maragon. The prober found at the Traffic Division that Maragon has had plenty of traffic and parking troubles too.

Rent Controls to Go in One Third of Area of enforcing the law," he went on, "and if I have to go to Congress at the end of the year for more funds to enforce it, that is what I will do."

Woods said the budget for his office for the 1950 year was slashed by the Senate from 26 million dollars to 21 million and then cut further to $17,500,000 by the Conference Committee of both houses.

The cut in funds, he said, was made "in spite of the fact that every metropolitan office has reported an increase in workload of from 30 to 50 per cent and processing of landlord petitions and tenants' petitions is running weeks behind.

"This meant a 35-per-cent reduction some place. I had the choice of cutting off 35 per cent of the people or cutting out about 35 per cent of our areas, beginning with the smallest, and then having good, efficient rent control in the rest of the country.

"This is not a move toward liquidation of rent control. We are going to be just as tough."

Since April 1 of this year, Woods said, controls have been lifted in 118 communities by local governments, in four States (Nebraska, Texas, Alabama and Wisconsin) by action of State Legislatures, and in 198 communities by the Housing Expediter's Office.

Woods disclosed the rent decontrol move in a speech at the twenty-eighth national convention of the Disabled American Veterans, then elaborated on his program later in an interview.

STOPS RUST in your gasoline tank
STOPS RUST which clogs fuel lines, strainers, carburetor jets
REDUCES WEAR caused by abrasive rust particles
WHY YOU NEED ANTI-RUST GASOLINE:
All gasolines contain minute quantities of water caused by moisture condensation. Result: Rust forms inside your gasoline tank. Rust particles, carried by the gasoline, clog fuel lines, strainers and carburetor jets—cause wear on precision parts in fuel pump and carburetor. The amazing new chemical, RD-119, in Sinclair Gasoline coats the inside of your car's fuel system with an invisible protective layer that prevents rust.

Witness Cites Vaughan 'Pressure'

PER CENT—From Pg. 1

ing was the case of the Allied Molasses Co., of Perth Amboy, N. J. This concern was declared by the Department of Agriculture to be "a flagrant and willful violator" of War Food Order 51, which rationed molasses and sugar syrups. It was accused of using more molasses than it was entitled to, and was prohibited from taking further deliveries until such time as its unauthorized usage had been made up.

This was in June, 1946.

In the autumn of that year, according to yesterday's testimony, General Vaughan and Maragon appeared in Milwaukee.

Milton Polland, a Milwaukee insurance agent, testified that he met Vaughan and Maragon and that time. He said he concluded that Maragon could help his nephew, Harold Ross, president of the Allied Molasses Co.

He explained that unless Ross could get molasses he would have to shut down the New Jersey plant.

William P. Rogers, committee counsel asked witness Polland how he met Maragon.

"If you know Maragon," Polland said, "it's not a question of meeting him. It's a question of getting rid of him after you've met him."

He told how Maragon's talk about "knowing everybody in Washington" had impressed him, and how he paid him $500 in cash as a starter to help out his nephew and Allied Molasses.

He said that he gave him a check for another $500 when he saw Maragon later here in Washington. Maragon by this time had taken over Suite 803 in the Carlton.

Would "Take Care" of It

Polland said that Maragon had told him that he would "take care of the problem"—the problem being molasses for the plant in New Jersey.

The subcommittee members were not at all satisfied with Polland's testimony, and Senator Mundt accused him of talking in "vague generalities."

Harold Ross, head of Allied Molasses, testified next. He told of meeting Maragon here and giving him more money, but he agreed with Polland that Maragon accomplished nothing.

Asked for $100—Fast

Ross said that Maragon first asked him for money to pay a bill at the Carlton.

"He said he needed $100 fast," Ross said, and laughter broke out in the committee room.

The witness was asked what assurance he got from Maragon.

"The man double talks," Ross said. "He just said, 'Don't worry, don't worry, everything will be all right.' That's all I got out of him."

He said he agreed to pay Maragon $2000 if he got results.

"Did Maragon accomplish the results?" he was asked.

"No," was the reply.

Hathorn Testifies

Herbert C. Hathorn of Arlington, Va., now an attorney associated with an economist in the "consulting business," testified next. He said that when he was with the Department of Agriculture in 1946, he was an alternate administrator in charge of the rationing of molasses.

He told how, in November, 1946, he found a note on his desk which said that General Vaughan had called from the White House and wanted him to return the call.

Asked to Remedy Plight

Telling of the conversation that ensued when he finally got in touch with General Vaughan, Hathorn said:

"It began by General Vaughan remarking that he had been referred to me by the Secretary's office—that he understood that I had control of the molasses order."

He said that General Vaughan asked him if he was familiar with the difficulties of the Allied Molasses Co., and that he replied that he was.

"He said," Hathorn continued, quoting Vaughan: "Well, I'd like to have you do something to remedy the situation."

Hathorn said he told General Vaughan that he didn't think the Secretary of Agriculture (then Clinton Anderson, now a Senator from New Mexico) would want to do anything under the circumstances.

At this point, he said, General Vaughan made the remark to the effect that Democrats had to "stick together."

Met at Football Game

He said that General Vaughan then told him of meeting Ross of Allied Molasses at a football game, and recited what he had told Ross. It was to the effect that rationing controls were coming off everything but "sugar, rice and rents." He said that Vaughan told him that, on the strength of this, Ross went ahead and bought large quantities of molasses.

"This might prove very embarrassing to me," he quoted Vaughan as saying, "and you'll have to do something about it.

Hathorn said he told Vaughan that he would have to take it up with Norris E. Dodd, then Undersecretary of Agriculture.

"The general was a little rough," Hathorn continued, "and I told him I couldn't conscientiously give relief to this company. I think he felt that I was not cooperative

Was 'Persistent'

But Gen. Vaughan, he said, was "persistent."

The witness continued:

"He ended up with the statement that he was very close to the President and that a friend in the White House could mean an awful lot to a man in one of the agencies, and also that he could get my job or get a job . . ."

Hathorn paused and then went on to say:

"My impression was that he inferred that he could help me or help someone in my position, or that he could be detrimental to their career in the Government.

"I told him in that case I would have to refer him to the front office, or to the secretary, and I had no further conversations with him at all."

Hathorn Supported

Hathorn said that the then Secretary Anderson and Undersecretary Dodd stood squarely behind him in his decision.

Senator McCarthy remarked that he wished Housing Expediter Tighe Woods had "the guts" of Hathorn. He was referring to earlier testimony in which it was brought out that General Vaughan told Woods to "hurry up" action on a construction permit for Tanforan race track in California—a request that was followed the next day by issurance of the permit.

Joseph E. Elvove, assistant director of the sugar branch of the Department of Agriculture, gave the subcommittee the full history of the Allied Molasses case, mentioning the part played by General Vaughan and Maragon.

He told how he and an Agriculture attorney Ben I. Melnicoff, visited Maragon in suite 803 at the Carlton, "at Mr. Maragon's insistence." He said that Maragon made at least 10 telephone calls about the case.

Told to Call White House

"In an least one instance," Elvove said, "the records show the call to have been made from General Vaughan's office and in some instances, it is recalled that when calls had to be returned, we were instructed by Mr. Maragon to call him at the White House . . .

"The impression which Mr. Maragon gave of his official status was never a very definite one. It was derived from our original meeting, from the fact that calls were received from and returned to the White House, and from vague references which Mr. Maragon made as to the nature of his work.

"I recall one occasion (probably our first meeting) when Mr. Maragon, in response to a question from Mr. Melnicoff as to the nature of his duties, answered in effect that he was 'helping the general.'

"On one of our visits to his office at the Carlton, Mr. Maragon insisted on returning us to the department in his car. On this occasion, he stopped at the Executive Offices of the White House, and was greeted in friendly fashion by uniformed guards, and by other persons entering the Executive Offices at the time."

Hathorn, earlier, had stated that Maragon had implied that he was "associated" with General Vaughan as a "liaison man" or "leg man."

At the outset of yesterday's hearing, Francis Flanagan, associate counsel for the committee, read into the record Maragon's testimony at a closed session on July 28—testimony which Senator McCarthy said justified a perjury indictment.

Maragon, according to the transcript, was asked if he had received any money as a result of negotiation of Government business, and made this reply:

"I told you when I first had the pleasure of meeting you that the statement has been made on the street corners, like in Philadelphia last year, that I made $50,000 through some people. A very substantial fellow, Milton S. Kronheim, told me about this story he heard in New York. Upon my return from Philadelphia, I went to the office of J. Edgar Hoover. I told Mr. Hoover what these gentlemen told me . . . I told him I wanted to make a statement . . . and, if you please, call your secretary . . . I dictated a statement and I told Mr. Hoover that I have at no time directly or indirectly negotiated anything with any Government department or any business for anyone, and I asked him to retain that in my file."

The transcript further quoted Maragon as saying that he got a letter from Jess Larson saying he had never purchased anything from the War Assets Administration. Then it gave the following colloquy between Counsel Rogers and Maragon:

Watch And Ward

Puritanism scored a dubious victory last week when the Park Police arrested an actor at the Meridian Hill Theater for some allegedly offensive lines in a play called On the Town. The complaints appear to have originated even before the play opened. At any rate, Sergt. B. J. Beckmann of the Park Police seems to have been forewarned, and attended the opening night, taking down some profane phrases which he reported to Assistant Corporation Counsel King. When the play was not "cleaned up" the next night, Sergeant Beckmann stepped in and took in custody the actor who spoke the proscribed language.

The phrases in question reportedly had to do with the association of the Deity with the word "damn." The phrase, to be sure, is offensive, but it is conversational among all classes of society, and long since has invaded the theater. If, indeed, the police objection were applied elsewhere, about half the legitimate theaters in the country would be closed. Wisely, Mr. King sensed the absurdity of the arrest and obtained the release of the actor concurrently with a revision of the play script. However, he remarked that he wished the District had a board of censorship to pass upon what is morally proper in the theater.

Now this puts the incident on a different plane. It is possible to sympathize with Mr. King's plaint, since a District statute clearly makes it a criminal offense to utter profanity in public. However, his remedy would be worse than the disease and would make for a narrow application of the law in the way which has become notorious in Boston at the instance of the Watch and Ward Society. Where and whether to draw the line in these matters is always a question, but in the last analysis there is no better or more effective censor than the taste of the audience as reflected at the box office. Certainly Washington, it seems to us, wants no police squad dictating what drama it may see, any more than it wants some bluenose ascribing immoral purposes to nude paintings at the National Gallery.

The A. G.'s Blacklist

The judges disagree as to the right of the Attorney General, acting without notice or hearing, to list organizations as being subversive. In an opinion handed down last week, Judges Proctor and Clark of the United States Court of Appeals for the District said that the pinning of a subversive tag on the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee violated no constitutional rights. It was done incident to carrying out the Government's loyalty program. The majority judges look upon the subversive list as merely administrative advice passed from the Attorney General to the Loyalty Review Boards. Since the A. G.'s action commanded nothing of the committee, denied it no license, privilege or immunity, and subjected it to no liability, the court said that the committee's appeal for an injunction did not present a justiciable dispute. Judge Edgerton, dissenting, contended that the Government's right to hire and fire is not the right to broadcast statements to the effect that any organization or its members are subversive.

Whatever may be the final conclusion of the courts as to what the Constitution requires, this decision clearly points to the need for a change of policy. The Attorney General published his list of subversive organizations without giving them any opportunity to defend themselves openly. The effect has been to discredit and undermine numerous organizations that claim to be operating for charitable, educational or other legitimate purposes. It may be that in all instances the blacklisted agencies are working to destroy our free institutions. But blacklists are invidious in a democratic society, and under no circumstances ought they to be established without giving the organization involved a hearing. The point is that the Attorney General is exercising this vast power with no check upon his judgment. Such unrestrained employment of power, even for the admirable purpose of aiding our security, is almost certain to be abused.

The Government's resort to blacklisting is especially unfortunate because there is a better way of exposing Communist and Fascist cells that seek to cloak their conspiratorial activities with a facade of charity. During the war the President found it necessary to set up a Committee on War Relief Agencies to protect the public against fraud in the guise of charity. Today there is still an acute need to let the people know where their charity funds go. Groups that seek public support and claim the privileges of tax exemption as charitable or educational agencies owe the public an accounting, and we think it should be required by law.

With such a law on the books, the subversive groups that are drawing millions of dollars from the people under false pretenses would be exposed for the benefit of the public as well as the loyalty boards. Communist fronts would be readily known from the sources of their funds and the nature of their expenditures. The choice to be made is not between blacklists and neglect of our security; rather it is between security measures that endanger our free institutions and more carefully devised security measures that could be made to strengthen those institutions.

Broken Curtain

In the time-honored tradition of diplomacy the recall from Belgrade of the Soviet ambassador to Yugoslavia is a sort of slap on the wrist of the affected country. It indicates that Moscow disapproves of Marshal Tito and of what he is doing. But "war" rather than mere disapproval had already been declared. "The Soviet government," according to its note of last Friday, indirectly addressed to the Yugoslav people, "looks on the present Yugoslav government not as a friend and ally but as an enemy and adversary of the Soviet Union." And even that declaration merely formalized the conflict that has been openly and bitterly waged since Tito was booted out of the Cominform in June, 1948.

There could be worse fates for Yugoslavia than ostracism from the Soviet bloc. One would be the status of captive ally within the bloc which is the lot of Yugoslavia's neighbors. Such a status would entail the crisis and misery and forced labor camps which have attended the collectivization program undertaken at Moscow's orders—an indigestible régimen for countries without the serf tradition which is a recent memory to the Russians. The Yugoslavs have escaped this fate because Tito, knowing that the independent-minded southern Slavs could not be herded Russian-style, resisted, and so invited and got excommunication. He is now utterly isolated from his coreligionists. We say coreligionists because Tito is still a Communist. The job of Western diplomacy is not to convert him to free enterprise, but to use him as a demonstration to the other satellites that deviation pays dividends. The current deal for a steel mill from America is a good beginning.

In the meantime the name-calling between Moscow and Belgrade has been most revealing. Laid bare is the aggression against Greece by both of the verbal protagonists. Those who took exception to the Greco-Turkish program on the grounds that the trouble in Greece was internal—and were not even persuaded by the United Nations inquiry to the contrary—should take notice.

The House Repents

The action of the House and Senate in rushing through a resolution providing emergency appropriations for agencies left without funds removes the threat of payless paydays for about 2.5 million military and civilian employes of the Federal Government. There were some valid objections to the form of the stop-gap extension bill that the House refused to approve last Monday. But the chief reason for its rejection, apparently, was anger at the Senate's dilatory tactics. By depriving Government agencies of funds, the House hoped to prod the Senate into speeding passage of bills on which it has not yet acted and to hasten agreement on other bills stalled in conference.

The House disposed of major appropriation bills many weeks ago, but, owing to the log jam in the Senate, this is the third time it has been called upon to pass an extension resolution. Congressman Dingell indicated he was getting "fed up" by these delays and other members echoed his sentiments. However, the method adopted to force action on appropriation bills is misdirected. For it is not the Senate but Government agencies and their employes that will be punished by cutting off funds.

Chairman Cannon of the Appropriations Committee warned that agencies operating hospitals will have no money to care for patients. The Veterans' Administration, he said, will have to stop paying pensions and other benefits. The Army, the Navy and the Air Force will lack authority to meet military payrolls, or provide transportation home for enlisted personnel eligible for discharge. The Interior Department and the Corps of Engineers will be unable to pay contractors and might have to close down some construction projects; and there will be no funds to pay for fighting forest fires on the public domain. The ECA will also have to cease its procurement operations, thereby disrupting its schedules and impairing its efficiency.

In short, there would have been widespread confusion and eventual paralysis of a wide range of governmental activities, if the House had not reconsidered its hasty action and voted the funds needed for continuing operations. A failure to do so, would not only have seriously embarrassed the agencies affected, but would have inflicted great financial hardship on an army of Government workers who would have been forced to borrow or draw on savings (if they have any) to tide them over payless paydays. It is these helpless persons and the long suffering public, not the Senate, that would have been victimized by the unimaginative pressure tactics of the House.

From Neurath To Ribbentrop

The American war in the Pacific sprang historically from the so-called Marco Polo Bridge (in Peiping) incident which drew Japan into armed conflict with China in July, 1937. But there was a more significant date six months earlier. In December, 1936, a bizarre incident befell Chiang Kai-shek. He was kidnapped while on a visit to the Shensi capital of Sian. The generalissimo had till then been engaged in an "After you, Alphonse" exhibition with the Russians as to who should take on the aggressive Japanese.

The captors were the Manchurian Marshal Chang Hsieh-liang and the Chinese Communists. The generalissimo was released only after he had pledged himself to adopt a more vigorous policy against the Japanese. The Manchurian marshal wanted his dominion in Manchuria back; the Communists, egged on by Moscow, wanted war on the Nipponese imperialists. After the generalissimo had given his pledge, Moscow retired to the sidelines, perfectly content. It had succeeded in diverting the Japanese from an attack on Russia, which vied with an attack on China in the mind of military Japan. Japan on her part rose to the bait offered by what seemed to Tokyo a Communist-Chiang Kai-shek unification of China against Japan. That is to say, she took advantage of the one of frequent incidents in north China to attack Chiang Kai-shek.

The war crimes trial in Japan shed some light on the subsequent history of the war in the Pacific. Now further light comes from the documents captured in Germany which have just been issued in systematic form by the State Department. The first volume is called From Neurath to Ribbentrop.

This deals extensively with the Far Eastern crisis in 1937. The documents show that Nazi Germany went to work immediately after the Marco Polo Bridge incident in both Tokyo and Nanking. To Japan she was tied by the anti-Comintern paet of November, 1936. With China she was carrying on an arms business and she also had a military mission working for Chiang Kai-shek. Chiang Kai-shek looked to Germany, when he was not looking to America and Britain, to intervene. He sought to persuade German help with the threat that he might have to turn to the Russians. That, he warned, would clearly involve the Germans in view of their anticommunism. And, he said, further, if no Russian help were forthcoming, and China were defeated, Germany might be equally implicated, because a defeated China might go Communist.

To all these blandishments the Nazis were at first very cagey. The anti-Comintern pact, they said, did not have as its purpose the combating of bolshevism on the territory of a third state. However, the pact did put them on terms of friendship with the Japanese, and they eventually promised to make some vague representations to Japan. They found the Japanese considered they were acting in China in the spirit of the anti-Comintern pact, and thus were entitled to German support. All they were aiming at, they said, was "the large scale and definitive disruption of all lines of communication between Soviet Russia and China, which necessitated the advance of Japanese troops as far as the Hwang" (Yellow River).

So Germany after many conversations extending over some weeks agreed to be a letter-carrier between Nanking and Tokyo. She promised both sides to exert "a friendly influence" on the other in the interests of peace. There was some haggling over initial terms, though these were more or less limited to the terms which Japan had already explained to Germany. In course of the haggling the Japanese began to score substantial successes on the Chinese battlefield. And this had a fateful result on the exchanges. Foreign Minister Hirota had to confess to the German Ambasasdor that "the field army had become more exacting in its demands."

The documents seem to show that Hirota, who was subsequently shot as a war criminal, would have been accommodating but for his military masters. Their appetite had grown both on power at home and on what it was feeding in China. The while Soviet Russia stood by, cold shouldering Sun Fo, who had gone to Moscow seeking aid. All she did was to sign an unnecessary nonaggression pact with China, though Japan insisted that she was "inciting" the Chinese.

Think of the might-have-beens, the bloody history that might have been avoided, if this strange excursion of Nazi intermediation had been successful!

The diplomatic winner, of course, was Soviet Russia. It was Moscow that provoked a war in the Far East just as it did in Europe when Molotov signed the 1939 agreement with Ribbentrop. The Russians wanted a proxy to take the Japanese off their necks. But China only served to whet Japan's appetite. So Russia agreed with her Japanese adversary in a neutrality pact, waiting again on the sidelines till the Western powers had become embroiled. The Japanese insured embroilment at Pearl Harbor. Later Russia was actually invited to participate in the administration of the final blow against the country with whom she had pledged her neutrality and who was then through. This occurred at Yalta. And here she got a price, subsequently ratified by the Chiang regime—the price of old concessions in Manchuria belonging to Japan, and at the expense of China, with whom she had an anti-aggression pact.

A skillful and unscrupulous diplomacy, this of Soviet Russia's! And postwar events have added to the prewar record. Moscow thinks, doubtless, it can wind up its Pied Piper career in the Far East by sucking the United States into the same morass in China into which Japan (which also thought it was killing communism) was drawn. The documents ought to be used, along with other evidence, to drive home a variety of lessons to the American people, as well as to propagandize the Chinese.

"Airmail And Subsidies"

Permit me to comment on your August 13 editorial, "Air Mail And Subsidies."

You say that the "generous subsidies" granted the airlines are "warranted by the importance of their development to the national economy and defense." Such a statement gives rise to several important questions.

Why, for instance, are the airlines singled out to receive such preferential treatment? It is true that they occupy an important place in our life, but so do the railroads; and the railroads certainly do not receive "generous subsidies" because of their importance to our country.

I had supposed the RFC existed for the purpose of assisting corporations in financial difficulty. In fact several railroads have availed themselves of the opportunity to "borrow" money from this agency. Why then does the Government not insist that all industry be treated alike, and compel the airlines to borrow money instead of giving it to them in the form of subsidies?

You state that the "public is entitled to a kind of accounting which will enable it to evaluate the character and extent of the outright grants it is making to foster commercial aviation." I say we are entitled to know more than this. We should know why 26 million dollars is being given the CAA this year for air navigational aids at commercial airports around the country, for the benefit of the airlines. We should be told why Government employes under CAA fill many jobs, the expense and personnel for which should rightly be the responsibility of the airlines.

And, finally, we should know why the Government shows such intense interest in the well-being of the commercial airlines and, at the same time, exhibits utter indifference to the welfare of the railroads.

Our railroads are still the backbone of America and fully as important to our development and national economy as any other transportation system. They are, therefore, entitled to the same consideration granted the airlines. They must soon get it or disappear as private corporations.

Understanding Poetry

You and Rudolph Von Abele both seem to miss the point in the letter and editor's note published August 10. Atomic physicists write for atomic physicists. They write in all degrees of complexity, depending on whether they are addressing elementary, intermediate, or advanced students. But the important distinction is that they are writing for specialists.

Poets, it was always my understanding, write to communicate feelings and/or ideas to mankind in general; or, at the very least, to poetry lovers. The latter, I used to think, needed no background of specialized knowledge to understand poetry's terminology and the operations it described; the most they needed were a nicely developed sensitivity to the sound and meaning of words plus a capacity for feeling.

Now along comes Professor Von Abele to say it just isn't so. Poetry is a specialized field whose writings are addressed to a cognoscenti quite as technically proficient as atomic physicists. If so, so be it. Let us eschew poetry; it is not for the likes of us. We are not competent to judge it, to criticize nor enjoy it. It has become another specialty in a specialized world. With its loss common man becomes a little commoner, but such are the hazards of a technical society.

Social Security Bill

Within hours after the House Ways and Means Committee announced informal approval of a bill to improve and broaden the Social Security Act, the press services carried a dispatch that congressional leaders were saying that the bill might get House approval but it was almost a certainty that there would not be sufficient time for the Senate to act on the bill before next year.

Enactment of an improved and broadened Social Security Act should be a piece of "must" legislation. Every day that Congress delays action on this bill is compelling several million persons who are drawing old age and survivors benefits to continue to exist on a substandard and pernicious amount that in most cases is below the monthly allowance given those who are recipients of State welfare boards.

Government figures state the average Social Security benefit is $25.13 monthly. Even with the 80 per cent average increase which the committee recommends the benefits will not provide luxury, but it will give some relief to the aged.

5-Percenters

The probing of the Senate investigating committee into the personnel and activities of the so-called 5-percenters is a good thing. I do, however, profess strong disfavor toward the attitude the press and other organizations have taken in lambasting and heckling the President to dismiss General Vaughan from the White House staff. Numerous innuendos have been directed against the President's integrity, soundness of principle, etc. I firmly believe that this approach is wrong.

In the event Vaughan is guilty, proper legal procedure need only be sought against him and due justice handed down. This can be done without dragging the President's name in the mud. I venture to say that if Mr. Truman would force the resignation of all individuals engaged in this or similar activities for individual pecuniary advancement, there would be few executives, Congressmen, chiefs of staff, etc., to account for. Hurley's Appearance

After viewing and listening to Patrick Hurley on television's "Meet the Press," it's no mystery to me any longer why our policy in China is in such a mess. Mr. Hurley spoke stupidly and showed such a complete lack of understanding of even the most simply posed questions that I wonder why they had him on the program at all. Here's one vote to put Mr. Hurley in the diplomatic post of Ambassador to Birdbrainia. RUTH STEINER.

"Cooperative Housing"

In your editorial of August 14 on cooperative housing, the statement is made that the housing bill reported by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee includes a program involving subsidies for cooperative housing.

This bill does not provide for subsidies. It provides for loans at an interest rate representing the cost of money to the Government on its longer term borrowings plus one half of 1 per cent to cover the cost of administration.

The making of direct Federal loans for cooperative housing at low interest rates follow a precedent already established by the Government in other fields involving direct loans at low interest rates to cooperatives, such as long-term loans to cooperatives in the Rural Electrification Program where the interest rate is 2 per cent rather than 3 per cent as provided in the housing bill. Other examples are direct Federal loans to farm cooperatives and similar assistance to the cooperatives of water users in irrigation projects.

Numerous other laws testify to the sound policy our Government has followed in making direct Federal loans when private capital was not available on the terms required to achieve a purpose in the national interest.

The fact that Congress has passed a public housing bill to take care of families of low income does not in any way meet the housing problem of families in the low middle income group whose incomes are above the level where they would be eligible for public housing. Moreover, the Senate Banking and Currency Committee recognized that the aids through mortgage insurance and other assistance to privately financed housing in the bill (S-2246) would not meet the needs of a substantial group of American citizens of modest incomes.

For example, Federal Reserve Board figures show that the income of 40 per cent of American families range between $2000 and $3750 per year. These families are caught in the middle. They cannot afford the privately financed housing which is being built, nor are they eligible for public housing. Rather than continuing to neglect their needs, the Senate Banking and Currency Committee determined that we should have a balanced and comprehensive program to assist these low middle income families to have decent homes, also.

It is true that the assistance in the form of more liberal financing is conditioned upon the housing cooperative achieving other economies in construction and operation. These would include self-help through a large degree of tenant maintenance and they would require the elimination of speculative profits. This was done as a means of assuring that there would be sufficient total savings—which we estimate will reduce the monthly costs of housing to about one third less than rental housing being currently insured by FHA—so that the program would serve the moderate income families for whom it is intended. Admission to occupy would be subject to an income limit and similar limits would apply on occupancy turnover, since cooperative owners would be required to resell their interests to the cooperative when they vacated.

Your editorial states that regulations of this kind might discourage the organization of housing cooperatives. This is questioned by the fact that the legislation as presently drawn has the support of the cooperative, veteran, labor and public interest organizations who are actively interested in sponsoring housing cooperatives. They feel, as the Senate Banking and Currency Committee does, that this program is a way of filling a gap in our present legislation by providing homes for moderate income families whose needs are now neglected.

Planetary Call To Arms

Unite Or Starve Choice

HERE IS THIS bugbear of population and food again, you reflect as you look at the newspaper. Strange how callous you remain to the fate of the teeming billions who a century or so hence may not have standing room on the globe, let alone crusts of bread. Strange how remote you feel from the two thirds of humans who even today don't have enough to eat. Strange how nonchalantly you accept the reckless ravaging of the planet by your own generation.

Still, everybody's doing it. It's even stranger, you tell yourself, how diplomats, statesmen, officials all over the world go on talking, arguing, fist-shaking about boundaries, corridors, armaments, spheres of influence, and dismiss with a shrug the greatest warmaker of all—world hunger; how they hide their heads from their common creeping enemy—a depleted planet.

But wait! This looks as though at last people were getting together on something basic. Here are scientists and engineers from all over the world, soil, forest, power, mine experts, chemists, physicists, entomologists, meeting at Lake Success—not as separate groups, but, for the first time in history, to pool their knowledge to save the world's resources.

THE UNITED Nations Scientific Conference on the Conservation and Utilization of Resources, it is called. The suggestion for the meeting came three years ago from President Truman, who hoped this might be a means by bringing some hope for tomorrow to those who live in utter poverty in backward areas.

Well, it was time there was action instead of talk, you tell yourself. True, the U. N. Food and Agriculture Organization has been effectively teaching people the world over how to grow more and better food. But how far will it get if the planet's supply of fuel, minerals, timber, soil, continue to go down the drain?

You think of the place in history this three-week meeting may have—this first global mobilization of mankind's brains against a world enemy as menacing, if not as dramatic, as the mythical Martian invader. You think of the bold and imaginative proposals for saving, even rejuvenating, the old planet that may come out of this pooled thinking of fine minds.

What big questions these men face. How can man's plunder of his planet be halted? How can more soil be put to use? Where will we turn for power when all the coal and oil are exhausted? What will we do for metals when the earth's supply is used up? What can we count on from atomic energy?

YOU READ of the reports to be presented to this world conservation parliament. One tells of the "malignant" poverty in the East where billions of people have even less food, shelter, clothing than before World War II. Maybe you aren't so remote from that, after all. Perhaps even you could live to see a war between the "haves" and "have nots" of the world.

You read other reports showing how man's invention may rise to meet his problems. Here is one suggesting two ways the United States could boost its food production. One would increase the efficiency of yields of animal products—milk production alone could be increased 60 per cent if all dairy farmers would use progressive methods. The other is to clear, drain or irrigate the Nation's 80 million idle acres, put them to producing crops.

Here is a sugestion for bringing about industrialization of backward peoples—the step generally counted on to raise their standards of living and make them a needed part of world commerce. This would first establish for them small-scale village industries so they would not be thrown bewildered and rootless into big factory towns.

You think of all the other ideas that may be born in this meeting. Little may be heard of them now, for this is not the kind of gathering that makes news. It will have no Vishinsky tirades, no "East-West Clash" headlines. Nor is it likely to have quick results even though quick action is needed. But at least it will produce ideas rather than futile argument. And ideas, unlike arguments, live on.

Teachers' Sick Leave

All Washington teachers should write immediately to Representative Abernethy of Mississippi and urge him to act at once on the teachers' sick leave bill. A number of weeks ago this bill was sent to conference after the Senate extended the length of cumulative sick leave from 60 to 90 days. The House voted for a 60-day period. Since that time nothing has been done. According to the House District Committee, Representative Abernethy is the one responsible for taking the bill up in conference as he is the one who originally introduced the bill. It would be a shame if a bill already passed by both Houses of Congress would be forgotten, especially as it is many years overdue and necessary to the welfare of the teacher. TEACHER.

The High Cost Of Strategic Bombing

By Stuart B. Barber

IT IS discouraging to find in Mr. Acheson's absorbing White Paper on China a double reiteration, by himself and by General Wedemeyer, of our standard national self-exculpation for selling out Manchuria at Yalta. General Wedemeyer even puts it in the standard language: we did it, he says, "to accelerate crushing defeat (of the Japanese) and thus save Allied lives."

Since we use the same argument to justify the burning of Japanese cities and the roasting of their inhabitants, and to justify the use of the atomic bomb, perhaps it is time we looked to see, not only whether these things were morally justified, but whether they were even necessary as expedients. We might just possibly find that our decisions to do all of these things were the result of obsolete military and political ideology. In this we might find useful lessons for the future. Our insistence on justifying bad decisions is why we rarely learn anything from history.

Just what lives were to be saved by all these sell-outs of our moral standards? Mr. Stimson has told us: the 500,000 casualties which were to be expected from our invasion of Japan in November, 1945. This, he said, made it necessary to conclude the war before the scheduled invasion date. But why was it necessary to invade Japan on that date or on any other date?

ADMIRAL Zacharias, who was head of naval intelligence at the time, has stated that five peace overtures were made by the Japanese before the atomic bomb was first dropped, the first as early as February, 1945, at the time of Yalta, six months before Hiroshima, nine months before the projected invasion.

The decline of the Japanese economy was known at that time; its dependence on certain outside supplies, notably oil which was totally cut off with the capture of Luzon in January, made it possible to predict with certainty that the nation could retain neither military effectiveness nor internal health for more than a short period. With this evidence, why did we have to invade? Why could we not have left Japan, like we left its island bases, to wither on the vine?

The answer, I think it will be found, lies in a combination of three interlocking concepts. First, the military obsession that the enemy nation must be physically assaulted and overrun by ground troops before a nation is properly defeated. Second, our political obsession with unconditional surrender, which, combined with the first, led to the belief that a complete capitulation of Japan could be assured only by shaking a bayonet under every Jap's nose. Third, the national inability to perceive that there can be intermediate stages between ferocious, all-out, total war on the one hand, and total "peace" on the other—stages such as a war of blockade.

What I mean I shall illustrate. But first I wish to maintain that not only were the invasion and occupation of Japan not necessary, but neither were the bloody assaults on Okinawa and Iwo Jima. And neither was the destruction of Japanese cities nor the dropping of the atomic bombs. Further, that it would have been possible to conclude the war against Japan, with unconditional surrender, and with far less casualties to ourselves as well as to the Japanese, by late 1945 or early 1946, had other concepts been followed.

LET US return to late January, 1945. Holding Luzon, we could cut the Japanese off completely from their southern empire. From the Marianas our B-29s could reach all of Japan from Tokyo south. Our carrier forces were able to roam at will up and down the Japanese coast. Our submarines could cruise freely in any deep-water sea. With these forces, and with no other forces, and with no other bases than we then possessed, it was possible to have strangled Japan into surrender with neither risk nor uncertainty.

Japan's own leaders knew they could not win the war once they lost Saipan in June, 1944. What is more, our own leaders knew they knew this.

The dependence of modern civilization and its military power on transportation, and on the fuels that make transportation possible, is insufficiently realized. From January, 1945, on the oil on which the Japanese air forces, navy and army depended was cut off. Exhaustion of reserves was but a matter of time. Without oil no Japanese offensive could have been undertaken, nor any effective air defense carried out. Thus Japan was then no threat to anyone. Her defenses against air attack could have caused far less casualties to the B-29s and the carrier forces than were suffered at Iwo and Okinawa, had the blockade campaign (without the invasions) continued another year.

JAPAN'S civilian economy was dependent upon two vulnerable means of transport: Shipping between coastal ports and to the Asiatic mainland, and the railway system, which was largely coastal. Highway transport was negligible. The shipping could have been largely bottled up, as it later was most effectively, by B-29 minelaying in the main channels and ports. (But the B-29s were too busy attacking cities to concentrate on the simpler job of minelaying.) The railroads could likewise have been kept inoperable by relatively modest carrier attacks at a dozen or so key points; for this the Strategic Bombing Survey is authority. (But the carriers were kept busy supporting or preparing for invasions.)

The carriers could also have disposed of shipping in Pacific ports beyond B-29 range. Submarines could, as they did, establish a complete control of the Sea of Japan. A few specialized B-29 missions to close the rail tunnel between the two main islands would have completed the total paralysis of Japanese transport of all types.

It is impossible to conceive of the helplessness of a nation totally bereft of transport. Factories cannot operate for lack of materials and fuel. (So why bomb them?). Their workers have nothing to do but contemplate their lack of work, fuel, food, and hope. (So why burn their homes?) By the winter of 1945-46 Japan could thus have been forced to surrender, unconditionally, through the very intolerability and hopelessness of her position, made visible to all. All this without dropping a single bomb on a city or factory, without the sacrifice of a single additional Marine on a beachhead, without selling out China at Yalta, without atom bombs, and with less casualties than were actually sustained.

WE COULD have brought a major part of our forces home in early 1945, cutting the costs of the war, in the full knowledge that the total blockade of Japanese transport made surrender inevitable in a matter of months. Why did it have to be sooner, since Japan could hurt no one in the meantime? Why did we have to maintain a total war, instead of the half-war of slowly strangling blockade?

We could have done these things, that is, had our surface-dominated services been willing to admit that war can be terminated by the pressure of air blockade, or had our airmen been less concerned with demonstrating the city-destroying capabilities of their weapons, or had our populace as a whole been more thoughtful and less bloodthirsty in its attitude toward the Japanese. We could even have done them if our civil leaders had been better informed of all the capabilities of American air power.

We now face a power whose predominant strength, like that of the Japanese, is in ground armies and ideologic tenacity, and whose predominent weaknesses, like those of the Japanese, are in transport and in oil. Are we going to learn the lessons, or are we going again down the same old street? Must we always glorify what we have done as the best possible way it could have been done?

Are we going to repeat with Admiral Denfeld that "of course we shall always have to occupy the enemy's territory"? (Has the Navy abandoned blockade as a concept, now that it is done from the air?) Will we repeat with General Bradley that "our contribution (to the Atlantic Pact) will be based on the atomic bomb"—meaning, fairly plainly, another orgy of city burning? Are we going to repeat the gory wastes of Okinawa and the dismal futilities of Cologne, Schweinfurt, Tokyo and Hiroshima? Are we going to routinely schedule another "Olympic" invasion, and then commit all manner of crimes to avoid its frightful costs?

Or are we going to resolutely turn our steps to the paths pointed out by the less spectacular but far more effective triumphs of military power achieved in the bombing of German oil plants, in the destruction of the Seine bridges, and in the mining of the Inland Sea—hopeful harbingers of a new approach to air power and war?

AMERICAN military power, maintained at a proper level, can strangle any enemy by means of his transport, if we will but concentrate on that as our sole end objective, ignoring the temptation to murder and burn along the way. We cannot do this job in the first few days or months of a war. First, with the moderate forces we can afford to keep in peacetime, we can but hold, or acquire, the bases and areas from which we must eventually reach the enemy's transport, and retain the areas from which our supplies and other support must come. We must then defeat those enemy armed forces which stand between us and our transport objectives.

To do these things we will need land, sea and air forces, to assure our ability to hold territory, maintain our sea supply lines, and control the air wherever we must operate. In peacetime we must maintain these forces not in the proportion required for our ultimate objectives, but in the proportion of what we must initially do—with no allowance for extraneous excursions into the field of mass murder and other futile shortcuts. We must build our air power and all our power accordingly.

Such a campaign can mesh with our national objectives and our techniques of political warfare as no other can. Unlike a campaign of universal indiscriminate destruction, or a campaign whose objective is occupation, it preserves our ability to remain at peace with the enemy people while fighting the diabolical government which enslaves them, and its arms of power. It preserves every potential by which we may appeal to mankind to rise and join us in our belief that the individual man is supremely important. Without this belief, and action based on it, we have no strength, and we are lost forever, like Winston Smith in Mr. Orwell's novel 1984.

WE CANNOT maintain a schizoid detachment between our military power and our moral power—except through a kind of "doublethink" which contains the seeds of our disintegration. We must plan our military power to reinforce our moral standards, not to sell them out.

It is to be hoped that the current congressional investigation of air power will reach to the roots of these aspects of military power and national power. The time is crucial, for directions are being established, which will be enduring. Ideological lines are being frozen—and erroneous interpretations of history—which will guide all our future thinking. Civilizations can perish, from not learning the lessons of their own history.

If this investigation does not bring out these matters it will not be because they have not been known and contemplated by many of the best minds within the military services. It will be because our top military leaders still mumble the concepts of a misread past, still utter the phrases that mean power for their individual services, like a broken record. It will be, perhaps most of all, because those subordinates who do see the truth lack the courage to state it publicly, regardless of the personal costs to them. That, in the end, is why civilizations do fail.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Trade With Tito

AFTER a long backstage controversy a decision finally has been reached to grant a license to Yugoslavia to buy a steel blooming mill in the United States. This is highly significant, for it means the affirmation of a positive policy to extend help to Marshal Tito so that he will maintain his independence in the face of ever-mounting threats from Soviet Russia.

Childs

This is a deliberate and calculated policy taken in the interest of world peace. It is not that anyone in responsible position has developed any illusions about Tito. He is just what he always has been—a Communist with an indomitable and ruthless conviction that communism is the only way of life.

But as the ever-louder thunder out of Moscow makes obvious, Tito's break with the Cominform is irreconcilable. The breach between Tito and his one-time mentor, Stalin, cannot be healed.

The real significance lies in the rift in the satellite bloc. The example is of overwhelming importance. If Tito can do it, then so can others. That explains the increasingly savage tone of the Moscow denunciations that now include the charge of "enemy" and "traitor."

If Tito can maintain his independence then there is a clear demonstration for all to see that even in eastern Europe the effort of Moscow to keep nation states in complete subjection in the interests of Russian aggression will not necessarily succeed. This is the hope for peace implicit in Tito's national communism.

YUGOSLAV exiles in this country—there are several layers out of the past—impatiently brush this reasoning aside. Whether it is national communism or Russian communism, they say, it is all the same. While they rarely express the hope openly, they cherish the dream that the past out of which they came will be restored by conquering armies from the West spearheaded by the United States.

While that past, judged by any objective standard, might be infinitely preferable to the dictatorship of the present, there is the question of whether it could be restored. Even with the unlimited treasure and the rivers of blood poured out in the last war, the broken pieces of the past might not be forged together in the old mold which was often repressive and feudal.

In the backstage debate over the steel blooming mill, Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson cited his adamant opposition in the years leading up to World War II to shipments of steel and oil destined for Japan. Johnson was then Assistant Secretary of War and often in sharp opposition to his then chief, Secretary of War Harry Woodring.

"I was against sending a pound of steel or a quart of oil to Japan," Johnson said vehemently, "because I was convinced that they were preparing to make war on the United States."

BUT THOSE favoring the policy of letting Tito have at least a minimum of help in this country pointed out a major difference between the two situations. The oil and steel that went to Japan were part of "business as usual." The steel mill for Yugoslavia is a "calculated risk" taken in the interests of peace.

In the license finally approved, the original request of the Yugoslav government has been scaled down. In the first instance it was for approximately three million dollars.

Therefore, it is more in the nature of a token than a major asset. It is, of course, to be paid for by the Tito government through the shipment to this country of minerals from Yugoslavia, some of which are in scarce supply and essential to the Nation's stockpile.

At the same time an economic survey group from the International Bank is in Belgrade studying the possibility of a loan to be based on timber and mineral production. Optimistic reports from the Yugoslav capital have indicated that an amount up to 50 million dollars eventually may be approved. While that is undoubtedly too high, there appears a strong possibility of one of the type of production-guaranteed loans that the bank has made with such conspicuous success in other parts of the world.

Moscow has just recalled Ambassador Anatoli Lavrentiev from Belgrade, at the same time denying that this presages a break in diplomatic relations. Nevertheless, the report persists that Russia intends to make the break and the satellites will follow suit. Then Tito will be cut off from even formal relations with the great power on his border and his only chance to build the independence of his country will lie with the West.

Tito Reported Ready to Start Negotiations With Greece

Athens, Aug. 17 (AP).—The newspaper Vradyn said today the Yugoslav government is preparing to send a minister to Greece to start negotiations on all disputes pending between the two countries.

The story coincided with a call today by Yugoslav charge d'affaires Jeselyn Martinovich on Panayotis Pipinelis, undersecretary of foreign affairs. It was the first time in three years that a representative of the Yugoslav legation had called on the ministry.

Albania protested to the United Nations—for the second time within a week—that Greek troops had invaded her soil.

Tirana radio said Athens troops killed five civilians when they poured more than 2000 shells into four frontier villages Sunday. It said the Greek troops were beaten off by Albanian soldiers.

[The United Press said Greeks fumed with anger today after official charges that Albania had violated the frontier to aid the guerillas. Nationalist newspapers demanded that the Greek army "march on Tirana."

[Yugoslavia has completely closed its frontier to Greek guerillas and those who are fleeing into Albania before a Greek army drive are being interned, Yugoslav reports said today.]

Czechs Rush Help To Flood Districts

Prague, Aug. 17 (AP).—The Czech Government today rushed troops, volunteer brigades and Red Cross units to flood-stricken areas.

Raging rivers and streams, swollen by two days of heavy rain, have taken a toll of 16 lives and caused millions of dollars in property damage. Many have been injured.

Retail Group Renews Drive To Get 'Lifo'

By S. Oliver Goodman

An intensified campaign to obtain an estimated 500 million dollars in tax refunds for merchants was launched here yesterday by the National Retail Dry Goods Association.

A broadside of brochures explaining in simple terms the complex "Last-In-First-Out" (Lifo) method of inventory valuation will be sent to all Congressmen and Senators, according to John C. Hazen, legislative representative of the NRDGA.

The 16-page booklet asks "even handed justice," charging the Government has "wrongfully collected" taxes on inventory paper profits since 1941 and, in so doing, "has flouted the will of Congress."

The NRDGA recommends that Congress correct this "injustice" by granting all retailers the right to adopt Lifo retroactively to 1941. This would mean the filing of returns amended for inventory valuation only.

According to the booklet, which Hazen said represents the viewpoint of thousands of retail merchants, the use of 1941 inventory values "can help promote lower prices for consumers and sounder tax-profit relationships for business men."

The booklet claims that the Treasury Department has ignored an act of Congress since 1939 "by refusing to permit retail merchants to file their tax returns based on Lifo, an accounting principle which provides a true reflection of inventory values."

HECHT SALES: Net sales of The Hecht Co., which operates 12 stores in Washington, Maryland and New York City, totaled $19,197,793 for the three months ended July 31, an increase of 3 per cent over the same 1948 period. For the six months ended July 31, sales aggregated $37,855,426, a gain of 2 per cent.

SCARE BUYING: The magazine Iron Age said buyers are concentrating on getting steel delivered before September 14, the date of expiration of the Truman truce in steel industry labor negotiations. In addition to this, said Iron Age, demand is coming because of a fear of higher prices or at least less chance of price cuts, general inflationary trends, better demand for manufacturers' products, and inventory reductions which in some cases went too far and now must be replaced.

BANK FIGURES: Highlights of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond's weekly report on 17 member Washington banks:

	Week Ended August 3	Week Ended August 10
Total loans	$230,247,000	$230,056,000
Real estate loans	80,788,000	80,192,000
Total assets	992,652,000	976,070,000
Demand deposits	745,166,000	730,512,000
Time deposits	176,510,000	176,549,000

BRIDGE FINANCING: Investment bankers are expecting a supplemental issue of at least $4,500,000 in revenue bonds for the proposed Chesapeake Bay bridge. This is because the indicated cost of the Maryland project exceeds original estimate made by the consulting engineers. Last October, a banking group sold $37,500,000 of Chesapeake Bay Bridge revenue bonds. On the basis of actual bids on hand, it now appears that at least 41 million dollars will be needed to finance the construction.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Walter H. Wiewel has been elected vice president of Crucible Steel Co. in charge of sales . . . Cleo F. Craig, a vice president in charge of operations, is a new director of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. . . . Charles E. Kile has been appointed a Washington representative of Reliance Life Insurance Co. . . . Harry W. Bendall is the new Alexandria area chairman for the National Automobile Dealers Association . . . Stanley Washburn, jr., formerly with American Airlines, has been appointed promotion director of Pan American World Airways.

VOLUME GREATER: Liquor sales in the first half of 1949 were 4 per cent greater in volume than in the same period of last year, the Census Bureau reported. They did even better in June, the final month of that period, than the average. June sales were 6 per cent above June, 1948. Bureau figures showed liquor stocks of wholesalers on June 30 were sufficient for 46 days of sales at the current rate, reflecting a reduction in inventory that was six days less than in June last year.

ODD LOTS: Potomac Electric Power Co. common stock yesterday reached a new all-time high of 14½ on the New York Stock Exchange, vindicating the faith of those who snapped up the recent additional stock issue at 12½ . . . The Nation's five losses in July fell to a new low of $49,592,000 for 1949 . . . Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food price index this week held unchanged at $5.89, but was 16.7 per cent below the year-ago level of $7.07 . . . Independent retailers' sales in July dropped 11 per cent under June and 8 per cent under July, 1948, the Commerce Department reported.

EARNINGS: Kaiser-Frazer Corp. reported a net loss of $2,336,518 for the three months ended June 30 (after a tax carryback credit), compared with net income of $3,916,000 or 85 cents a share in the same 1948 period. Other earnings reports:

Critics of FBI Answered in Hoover Article

By the United Press

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover yesterday struck back indirectly but sharply at critics of his agency during the Coplon trial, accusing them of "politics," "selfishness" and "wanton disregard for the truth."

His first public statement construed as an answer to his critics was contained in a message to the Nation's police officials in the current issue of the FBI's Law Enforcement Bulletin.

He said it is "inexcusable" to criticize a law enforcement agency when the attacks are "not based on facts," and added that unjustified criticism breaks down the confidence of the public in police agencies.

"Those who attempt to shatter that confidence are attacking the administration of justice—the prime function of government, he said. He did not mention his agency specifically.

The FBI was subjected to attack from several sources because some of its anonymous reports, forced into the open during the spy trial of ex-Government girl Judith Coplon two months ago, linked well-known persons with subversives.

Dr. E. U. Condon, director of the United States Bureau of Standards, called the FBI "stupid" and its reports "dishonest" because his wife's name came up in one of them—a report by an unnamed FBI "informant." Condon demanded that Hoover personally apologize to his wife.

In his defense of police agencies in general, Hoover said that "oftentimes law enforcement agencies are placed in a position where, for the time being, they cannot defend themselves."

"When their record is clean, however, there is not too much cause for concern. Time conspires to reveal the truth, and the motives of those who, in the final analysis, actually are aligning themselves with the criminal forces eventually will be disclosed."

Minnesota Medical Group Denies Advertising Would Be Bribe to Press

By The Associated Press

A charge was made yesterday—and immediately denied—that when Minnesota's physicians decided to advertise they offered "an open bribe to the press of the State."

The Committee for the Nation's Health said a resolution to permit newspaper advertising, adopted recently by the Minnesota Medical Association, is a part of the doctors' "fight against national health insurance and other measures of the Truman health program."

A spokesman for the Minnesota doctors promptly denied the charge

R. R. Rosell, executive secretary of the Minnesota State Medical Association, told a reporter in Minneapolis:

"The resolution passed by the State association is nothing new. It defined what a doctor can do in the way of personal advertising; that is exactly the same as it has been for years.

"If we wanted to deliver a message to the public, we couldn't expect the newspapers to carry it except on an advertising basis."

Alan McIntosh, president of the Minnesota Editorial Association and publisher of the Luverne (Minn.) weekly Star Herald, said:

"The whole thing is so absurd it's hardly worth commenting on. There is no deal as far as Minnesota editors are concerned. We haven't solicited the doctors in Rock County for advertising and I doubt whether doctors in other counties have been approached by newspapers."

The Committee for the Nation's Health is a private organization designed, it says, to inform the public of Mr. Truman's national health insurance program.

Its chairman is Dr. Channing Frothingham of Boston, former chairman of the Massachusetts unit of the American Medical Association.

No Orders Within Party, Red Declares

New York, Aug. 17 (AP).—Nobody gives orders in the Communist Party, a defense witness today told the conspiracy trial of 11 top Red leaders charged with conspiracy to advocate violent overthrow of the United States Government.

Wilbur S. Broms, a Brooklyn Communist, said any party activity is mapped out in discussion groups after there is something like a meeting of minds.

He drew the immediate interest of Federal Judge Harold R. Medina, presiding over the trial that entered its eighth month today.

Judge Medina wanted to know if one Communist never ordered another to do something.

"That's right," replied Broms.

"So there can't be any such thing as an order in the Communist Party?" the court asked.

"That's right," repeated Broms.

"And that's because its democratic and people don't like to give orders?" Medina persisted.

"That's right," Broms said again.

Brom's testimony was offered to counter a Government claim that Communists were ordered to press for recruits among power and communication workers.

A Government witness some time ago said such a recruiting program was intended to permit Reds to take over power plants and communications centers if the occasion arose.

U. S. Seeks Space For 500 Million Bushels of Grain

By the United Press

The Government announced yesterday that it would buy 500 million bushels of grain storage space if the price is right and if it can be set aside in time to help handle the tremendous grain surplus expected this fall.

The announcement was the first official admission that the additional space already arranged for will be inadequate to cope with the huge grain stocks expected to be dumped in the Government's lap under the price support program.

The Agriculture Department already has contracted for construction of 112,837,640 bushels of storage capacity, mostly in the corn belt area. That would be in addition to about 45 million bushels of storage already owned by the Government.

The Government already has taken less drastic steps to meet the impending storage crisis, including the use of vessels from the Maritime Commission's "mothball" fleet as floating wheat storage bins. It also has granted emergency loans on southwestern wheat that had to be piled on the ground because of storage shortages.

Passion Play Loan

Munich, Germany, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—American authorities have approved a $300,000 loan to finance the Oberammergau Passion Plays in Bavaria, it was announced today.

France Hampered By Rain Deficiency

Paris, Aug. 17 (NYHT).—There have been showers now and then in France during the last few days, a matter that would normally be of little consequence. Rain is expected to fall in France during August.

The regrettable fact is, however, that a solid rainfall in France is in a fair way of becoming news whenever it comes along. France seems to have lost the habit.

News reports from Paris this year have dwelt upon the 35 successive days without rain, the hottest July in more than half a century, the electricity cuts and the crop failures.

But this is only a portion of the story. Rainfall has been desperately deficient in France for nine successive years. Such a deficiency is not necessarily characterized by long periods without rain. It manifests itself instead in long periods when rain comes regularly, but never in great quantity.

It is this latter kind of drought—a chronic drought—that has France in its clutches. The French farmer sees his crops wither under the acute drought, but the tourist who discovers that his hotel can furnish him neither electricity nor bath water is the victim of the chronic drought: the nine years of dryness from which this country is suffering.

The loss of a few inches of rain, year after year, is as fundamentally damaging to the balance of nature as a degree of sub-normal temperature would be to a human.

In France it does not necessarily show up in crop damage. Utilization of land is relatively low here, year by year, and plowing is shallow. A farmer is dependent on rainfall during the spring and summer, and a relatively small amount of rain that comes at the right time is sufficient for him. Irrigation is not widely practiced, and the level of streams and wells is of secondary importance.

In the matter of hydroelectric production, total rainfall is the criterion. Dams store water during periods of rainfall and run-off, and they release it during dry spells. Since a stable annual rainfall has been missing France's hydroelectric production has reached a stage of crisis.

Dams and reservoirs are empty, from an engineering point of view. It has become impossible to produce the electricity that France must have to exist normally. Hotel lobbies are dark and electricity in many places is available only between 7 p. m. and 11.

Throughout France, also, the shortage of household and industrial water is noticeable. Wells and streams are running dry.

The Weather Bureau doesn't fear France is fated to become a desert. The meteorologists find the same sequence of dry years late in the last century, followed by a sequence of wet years. Over the century they distinguish no notable change.

Ship to Sail In Response to Lady's Card

Charleston, S. C., Aug. 17 (AP). A Navy destroyer is coming to Charleston next month to the delight of a spry little lady of 79 years who lives in Summerville.

The 2200-ton destroyer Ingraham, known to the United States Navy as the DD694, will come here from its Norfolk, Va., base for a three-day stay starting September 24. A postcard written by Mrs. George Ingraham Hutchinson, of Summerville, to Senator Maybank (D., S. C.) is credited with bringing about the visit.

Mrs. Hutchinson has an interest in the destroyer Ingraham. First, it's named in honor of her grandfather, Duncan Nathaniel Ingraham, who served with distinction as an officer in both the United States and Confedearte navies. And second, Mrs. Hutchinson christened the Ingraham just before it slid down the ways at Kearny, N. J., on January 18, 1944.

Uncle Sam Shows Heart

Officially, the Ingraham simply will sail from Norfolk to Charleston. The orders under which Comdr. H. H. Kait will sail here are in typical formal and unemotional Navy language, but the whole story suggests that underneath all the red tape generally accredited to the services, the Government has a heart.

A few weeks ago Mrs. Hutchinson penned a message to Senator Maybank on a penny postcard.

"I was 79 years old last Sunday," she said. "I would be so pleased to meet some of the men I met when I christened the 'Mighty I'—" The message was signed, "Kitty Hasell Hutchinson, of Summerville."

The DD694 is the third Navy ship to bear the name Ingraham. The first, launched on July 4, 1918, was scrapped in 1930.

Ship Christened by Her

The second Ingraham, the DD444, was built at the Charleston Navy Yard and was christened by Mrs. Hutchinson at the beginning of World War II. The DD444 was sunk in a collision in the Atlantic on August 2, 1942.

The Navy today notified Mrs. Hutchinson of the Ingraham's pending trip here. Reached by telephone in Summerville, Mrs. Hutchinson told a reporter she was "afraid I've put my foot in it."

"I just wanted to go to the ship quietly and give some little things to the ship and talk to the captain," she added.

She said she plans to present the skipper a picture of her grandfather, the Ingraham's namesake, and also an article describing his contributions to the United States and Confederate navies.

"I told the naval officer who called me about it that I wanted to write on the bottom of grandfather's picture, 'Wooden ships and iron men—Iron ships and wooden men'," she said.

Mme. Chiang Kai-shek Visiting Marshalls

Raquette Lake, N. Y., Aug. 16 (AP)—Madame Chiang Kai-shek is a guest of General and Mrs. George C. Marshall at the old J. P. Morgan estate near this Adirondack Mountain village.

Raquette Lake, N. Y. Aug. 17 mo arrived by train for a 10-day visit, it was learned. General Marshall described the visit as "purely social."

Jap Salvation Army Climbs Long Road Back; Membership About Third of Prewar 75,000

Japan's Salvation Army, forced to cease all activities during the war, today has a membership of about one third its prewar strength of 75,000, according to Commissioner Masuzo Uyemura.

The commissioner, commander of the Salvation Army in Japan, was in Washington this week to confer with officials here after attending a world conference of Salvation Army commissioners in London, England.

In 1940, he said, the Japanese government classified the Salvation Army as an agent of Great Britain and all of its properties were taken over by the government. Officers were forced to cease wearing uniforms and members of the church became part of the National Christian Church.

Reestablished in 1947 as part of the international organization, the Salvation Army today has more than 200 officers wearing the traditional uniforms, complete with caps bearing the character "Save the World Army," he said.

Commissioner Uyemura estimated that it will take the Salvation Army from seven to ten years to return to its prewar membership in Japan. Though once completly self-sufficient, the army today needs the aid in funds and materials it is receiving from international headquarters.

MASUZO UYEMURA
Japanese salvationist . . .

Biggest job of the postwar Japanese army, its commissioner said, is an increased evangelistic program. Already it has rebuilt many hospitals and homes for children and young people, and more are planned, he said.

As part of this expansion, the Japanese army will expand its program of outdoor preaching and street bands. Instruments for these bands are manufactured at international headquarters in London, which also distributes traditional Christian hymns with different translations.

Commissioner Uyemura, who is 64, was converted to Christianity from Buddhism 42 years ago and became a Salvation Army officer. Since then he has risen to the rank of territorial commander, highest post in the army.

The commissioner praised Gen. Douglas MacArthur as a "great Christian soldier and stateman" whose occupation methods are wise and widely accepted. Although the Japanese people are eager to have a peace treaty signed and want to regain their place in the world, he said, they believe General MacArthur is working toward that end.

Standards Cut Held Only Way Out for Britain

London, Aug. 17 (AP).—The Federation of British Industries today asserted the only way for Britain to pull out of its economic nose dive is to lower its standard of living.

The federation said the Labor government's spending on social welfare schemes must be curtailed. One of these is the costly national health service.

In a formal statement, the federation also called for lower taxes, fewer government controls, and harder work to produce more without raising prices.

It added that Labor Party plans for nationalizing more basic industries, such as iron and steel, are "distracting" the nation's producers at a time when business problems demand their closest attention.

The federation represents 6000 owners of British industries. It corresponds roughly to America's National Association of Manufacturers.

Its statement said: "There can be no escape from the hard logic that our standards of living, including social services, must be cut according to the cloth we can make from now on.

"We are living byond our means.

"The vast and menacing increase in state expenditure constitutes the basic inflationary influence in our whole economy.

"It is this which bears most heavily upon production costs and is one of the most serious handicaps to the future of British trade and to the living standards of our people."

Britain's gold and dollar reserves—its working capital for trade with the dollar area—had dwindled to $1,624,000,000 at the end of June.

The federation said this is "20 per cent below the lowest margin of safety."

Iran Hits Russia on Caviar Pact

Tehran, Iran, Aug. 17 (AP)—The Soviet Union is making a lot of money off caviar—usually thought of as a delicacy of the so-called capitalist class.

Iran, Russia's southern neighbor on the Caspian Sea, charges the Soviet is making much more than it should—at Iran's expense.

The two countries have had a joint agreement since 1927 on the caviar fisheries in the Caspian—reputedly the greatest caviar source in the world.

Caviar, as you know, is nothing but fish eggs. But the sturgeon in the Caspian are supposed to produce the best, or some of the best, caviar known to connoisseurs.

The Irano-Soviet Fisheries, operating on the southern coast of the Caspian—in Iranian territory—is owned 50-50 by Russia and Iran. According to the concession, which expires in 1952, Iran is supposed to get 50 per cent of the profits.

Iran claims not only that the Soviet is raking off most of the profits but that the Russians are exploiting the fish reserves to such an extent that the sturgeon is near extinction.

There is no accurate figure on the caviar take. One source estimates it at a minimum of 40 tons annually. Export value is figured at $40,000 a ton and on the 50-50 basis, Iran should receive at least one million dollars a year.

But the Russians, sticking to the terms of the 1927 agreement, which specifies payments in Iranian rials, credit Iran only with yearly fixed royalties of 300,000 rials—about $25,000.

Russia is reported in arrears on that.

Austrian Archduke Sues Kin Over Castle

New York, Aug. 17 (U.P.)—Archduke Franz Josef of Hapsburg filed a $949,999 damage suit against his brother and sister-in-law in Supreme Court today, claiming they had sold the family castle and other ancestral property in Austria without giving him his share of the receipts.

Adjustment Hard For Unwed Mother

She left her Government job, went home to attend those frantic, last-minute details.

Ed visited her there again. The wait seemed too long, even though the time was getting shorter. Ed and Connie "jumped the gun."

Fate Moves In

Then an ironic fate moved in, with quick, painful blows. Ed got a letter from his wife, asking him to take their 3-year-old child. She said the child needed two parents for a normal home life.

While Ed was still mulling this offer over, a telegram came. His wife had driven their car onto the railroad tracks, stalled it there, and waited for a train to hit her. The train had. She was in critical condition. Ed flew back to Washington.

For days, no one knew whether "Mrs. Ed." would live or die. Finally, the doctor's verdict: "She'll live, but she will never walk again."

The next blow was not long in coming—word from Connie that she was pregnant.

Ed was frantic—his wife, a cripple. The girl he loved, pregnant. To whom did he owe more allegiance?

The decision was hard to make, but inevitable. He could not desert his wife.

Connie packed away her trousseau. She went to a maternity home and had her child. When it came, she offered it for adoption. She left the East then and headed West, no longer starry-eyed about life, but determined to pick up the pieces as best she could.

Another Case

"Tragic," said the social worker. She paused for a moment. "Here's another case. Not quite the same, and I've always wondered whether Kathryn did the right thing . . ."

It was back during the war. Kathryn was engaged to an Air Force officer on duty overseas. At war's end he was eligible for discharge, and anxious to get out. A job with a national airline was waiting for him here. So was Kathryn.

When his discharge was already due, John was sent back to the States on a special mission, ferrying VIPs. It had been three years since he had seen Kathryn.

They had a week together before he returned to his overseas post. They, too, "jumped the gun."

Three days later, John was killed. A month later, Kathryn knew she was pregnant.

Nothing would have induced her to destroy the baby. On the other hand, she felt a sense of shame, of guilt, for having gone outside the social pattern.

Even though her engagement had been published, and marriage had been prevented only by John's death, Kathryn could not bring herself to tell either her own family or John's of the coming birth.

When the child came, she released it for adoption.

The social worker paused. "I wouldn't have," she said. "I would have told both families, and fixed up some story to tell the public, so that the child could at least have had one of his parents. But Kathryn apparently just couldn't."

New Start

When it was all over, Kathryn got herself a new job; started over.

What are Kathryn's chances—Connie's chances—for finding happiness?

Well, the social worker says, "That depends."

With girls like Kathryn and Connie, the only action which put them outside the social "pale" was jumping the gun on their marriages.

Both girls, the social worker said, seemed well adjusted. Except for the peculiar circumstances which ended their proposed marital relationships, they probably could have looked forward to a happy life.

So, unless the ordeal of going through unwed motherhood left them scarred or bitter, both Kathryn and Connie, once they had readjusted to the new aspects of their lives, had much better than a 50-50 chance of finding happiness.

Farm Meeting Bemoans Drought—In Downpour

Burlington, Vt., Aug. 17 (AP).—Lack of rain was cited by several speakers today as one of the woes plaguing Vermont farmers.

At the annual farmers' and businessmen's field day, that point was emphasized by Gov. Ernest W. Gibson, United States Senator George D. Aiken (R., Vt.) and Representative Charles A. Plumley (R., Vt.).

They spoke in a downpour.

Ground is Broken In Arlington for Adventist Church

Elder H. J. Detwiler, president of the Potomac Conference, wielded a shovel last night in ground-breaking ceremonies for the new Arlington Seventh-day Adventist Church at Lincoln and S. 9th sts.

Until the $65,000, 200-seat church is completed, the congregation will continue meeting at the old church building, 1101 S. Glebe rd., Arlington.

Participating in the ceremonies were Elder Dan A. Ochs, president of the Columbia Union Conference of Seventh-day Adventists, the main speaker; Elder Andrew J. Robbins, church pastor, who reviewed the church's history; W. H. Jones, secretary-treasurer of the Potomac Conference, and A. R. P. Johnson, church elder.

Jury Gets 'Hearts' Murder Case

New York, Aug. 17 (AP).—The lonely hearts murder trial of Martha Beck and Raymond Fernandez went to the jury tonight after a 5-hour charge by the judge.

The jury was given the case by Justice Ferdinand Pecora at 6:56 p. m. (E.S.T.). It went out immediately to start its deliberations.

The jury took a dinner recess about 15 minutes later. It returned to the jury room at 8:38 p. m.

Justice Pecora outlined several possible verdicts:

Conviction of both or either defendant of murder in the first or second degree, manslaughter in the first or second degree, acquittal of either or both defendants and acquittal of Mrs. Beck on grounds of temporary insanity.

The pair, she a hefty 29-year-old Florida divorcee and he a balding man of 34, are accused of slaying Mrs. Janet Fay, 66, of Albany, N. Y.

Their racket of fleecing women of their savings through lonely hearts clubs, the State claims, led to the slaying here and to two others in Michigan.

Farmers Ask Mexican Labor Import Aids

By The Associated Press

A delegation of Western farm operators begged President Truman yesterday to do something to make it easier for them to bring in Mexicans for "stoop" labor in their fields.

A new agreement made by the State Department and the Mexican government August 1 provides that labor must be recruited at least 200 miles south of the border, with the American employer paying the laborers' round-trip transportation expenses.

Immigration Curbed

President Truman yesterday signed a proclamation authorizing the Attorney General to prevent admission to this country of any alien whose entry he considers "prejudicial to the interests of the United States."

WCTU Scores Yale Studies Of Alcohol

Philadelphia, Aug. 17 (AP).—The Women's Christian Temperance Union has "noted a fermenting friendliness" between Yale University's School of Alcohol Studies and the drink industry, WCTU President Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin declared today.

On the eve of the organization's seventy-fifth anniversary convention, Mrs. Colvin said:

"It is hard to conceive of a great university teaching a subject so subsidized."

Mrs. Colvin called attention to a series of "antialcohol supplements" made public today.

The supplements, written by Ernest Gordon of Francestown, N. H., named G. H. Rahr, president of the Rahr Malting Co., Manitowoc, Wis., as a "founding father" of the Yale school.

Quoting from Gordon's text, Mrs. Colvin said:

"Why has the Yale school, subsidized and indorsed from these quarters, sought from the beginning to influence the Protestant churches?

"The point of view of Yale is distinctly unfriendly to prohibition.

"It also dissents, as far as one can judge, from the total abstinence point of view, and thus is opposed to the historical position of the Protestant churches in recent times. It is apparently ready to give to Protestanism a new orientation."

At New Haven, Conn., Leon A. Greenberg said for Yale:

"The Yale section of alcohol studies has maintained a consistently neutral position in regard to any controversy between the wets and the drys."

Body of Zionist Founder Buried On Jerusalem Hill

Jerusalem, Aug. 17 (AP).—The body of Theodor Herzel, Austrian-born founder of modern political Zionism, was lowered into a bombproof tomb today on the highest of Jerusalem's seven hills.

Herzel, who died in Vienna in 1904, predicted a half century ago that a Jewish state would arise within 50 years. His body was flown from Austria to Israel's Lydda Airport yesterday and taken to Tel Aviv where it lay in state throughout the night.

The funeral procession began before dawn after an estimated 200,000 persons had filed past the coffin.

Israeli Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion described the procession as a "victory march," not a funeral procession—a victory over a vision that became a reality."

Cuban Officials Fight 1-Minute Saber Duel

Havana, Cuba, Aug. 17 (AP).—Two government officials settled an affair of honor today in a one-minute duel with sabers at a jai-alai court. Senator Ruben de Leon, Minister of the Interior, suffered a scalp cut that required three stitches.

Martin Castellanos, Undersecretary of Sanitation, was not hurt.

The men embraced after the duel. Castellanos challenged De Leon after the latter slapped his face in a heated political debate.

ERP Nations Lay Free Trade Plans

Paris, Aug. 17 (NYHT).—In a quick but vague answer to yesterday's appeal by Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul G. Hoffman for a "single-market Europe," the European Marshall Plan organization announced plans here today for freeing trade among member countries.

Herve Alphand, economic chief of the French Foreign Ministry and chairman of the Trade Committee of the Organization for European Economic Cooperation, announced the intention of the 19 Marshall Plan countries to begin "liberalizing" business among themselves on October 1.

Under the program each country will submit three lists: One of products they are willing to import without limit, another of products they will accept without limit if other countries do likewise and a third of products for which they will set up a total limit that will be open to all other OEEC countries without favor.

Hoffman Says U. S. Hopes Aid Need Will End in '52

Venice, Aug. 17 (NYHT.).—Paul G. Hoffman, Administrator of the Economic Cooperation Administration, emphasized here tonight that the United States hopes "no further help will be needed" by European nations when the Marshall Plan expires on June 30, 1952.

It is "worthwhile reminding Europe that the Marshall Plan ends" in 1952, he said after he conferred with Premier Alcide de Gasperi of Italy.

"If there are no gift dollars," he said, "there must be earned dollars." The Marshall Plan countries must get busy immediately, he said, to earn the dollars they need.

One on the Aisle—

'Oldie' at Olney Bowls Them Over

By Richard L. Coe

THE OLNEY'S "Charm" is the sort of comedy only audiences enjoy.

The laughingest audience of the season greeted this relic of the midtwenties, revived to give popular Dean Harens a starring role. This it certainly does—the part fits Dean like a T-shirt—but it also confounds anyone who chooses to be lofty about the Drayma. Say what you will about John Kirkpatrick's play, if it doesn't set you laughing, you'll be a mighty conspicuous body.

What's it about? You won't believe it, but it tells how a small-town boy kept his girl from running off to New York by following, and strictly, "The Book of Charm," sold him by an overblown salesman. That's all there is—but there's a lot of it.

"The Book of Charm" enjoins our hero to give a "souper" in the French manner and it turns out to be the gol-durndest party. It loses him his closest friends, but so thoroughly does he influence people that even Dale Carnegie would feel chagrined if he knew that his popular masterpiece had been anticipated with such success.

Kirkpatrick's play was a so-so comedy of the 1923-24 season, with Elizabeth Patterson as the girl's mother, a part in which Paula Trueman is magnificently funny. Olney's Richard Skinner reports he revived it at one of his summer theaters a decade ago with enormous success. Harry Ellerbe playing the boy, Mildred Natwick, the mother.

"CHARM."—Richard Skinner and Evelyn Freyman present the comedy by John Kirkpatrick, with settings by S. Syrjala and staged by Harry Ellerbe. Matinees Saturday and Sunday. At the Olney Theater.

Ellerbe's Whammy Know-How

Now Ellerbe is in the director's shoes and he has shown whammy know-how in pointing up the laughs. He's shrewdly shifted the locale from the 'twenties to "early in the century," which gives the script a nostalgic whimsy it wouldn't have had in the too-close 'twenties. He's worked in John Bunney, who gets a laugh so solid that Ellerbe's reference to Flora Finch is lost in the gurgle.

Star Harens has himself a frenzied, wonderful time as the quiet lad who becomes the joy of feminine hearts by following the book. If there are many laughs he didn't squeeze from the lines I certainly didn't miss 'em. It's a likeable part which he plays with unerring skill.

Miss Trueman (mind that "e," printer!) is truly wonderful as the mother who observes that "Nobody ever leaves New York. That's what makes it so big. They just sit there till it kills them." She has a juicy second-act party scene in which, feigning gentility, she reclines on a quilted chaise-longue, wanly waving her arm and convincing all her guests that she's miserably ill.

Miss Bevans Scores Again

There are other amusing character sketches in "Charm": Philippa Bevans as a talkative neighbor, William H. Putch as the violent book-seller, Donald Foster as the apoplectic father, June Dayton as her offstage husband's on-stage sweetheart. And back with the Olney company is Joseph Hardy, one of the Olney's regular stars of two summers ago. Hardy plays a slick New Yorker who inspires the Gotham ambitions and it's good to have him back on our country stage.

The unquestioned success of "Charm" with the first nighters emphasizes again the many audiences there are for plays in our land. I've a strong feeling the New York producers, angels and critics would sneer at the farcical irrationalities of "Charm," but that audiences would laugh as few are able to. In fact, if I had an extra $50,000 on hand, I'd——. Well, I don't.

Syrjala's settings are properly monstrous, and if it's laughs you're wanting, trek out to "Charm."

THIS being Ethel Barrymore week (and I hope you heard WMAL's heartening rebroadcast of that half-hour), the Olney's Martin Schwartz reminds me that in my column about the lady, I forgot to mention that it was she who opened the Olney 10 years ago . . . The bill that night, under Steve Cochran's management, was "Ethel Barrymore in The Constant Wife." . . . Yes, alas, I did forget.

ISLANDER: Jean Simmons as the child who grows into a beautiful woman on "The Blue Lagoon" with but one companion—a handsome young man. This British Technicolored visit to the South Seas opened yesterday on Keith's screen

Alone on a Pacific Isle

Boy and Girl Are 'Crusoes' In 'Blue Lagoon' at Keith's

Curiously enough, Keith's offers us another result of what happens when one of those how-to-behave manner books winds up in an unexpected spot. The Olney's play (reviewed today) concerns a book of "Charm." Keith's Technicolored film touches on a book of etiquette, one of the few possessions of two children who grow up on a Pacific isle.

"The Blue Lagoon" is this J. Arthur Rank release, and while it's pleasant watching, it suffers from not making up its mind exactly what angle of the story it wishes to stress.

Jean Simmons, Olivier's lovely Ophelia in his film "Hamlet," is the girl, and a blond young man, new to our screens, Donald Houston, is the youth.

We see them first as 9 and 10-year-olds—Susan Stranks and Peter Jones—bound for down under in a ship which blows up. With one member of the crew, they are the sole survivors. Fate brings them to a charming, fruitful islet, but within six months the crewman (Noel Purcell) is dead.

Thus we have a male and female adolescent, growing up together, fending for food, clothing and knowledge. And they fend mighty well indeed. Their instinct for the properly clad body might fascinate the anthropologists, but it at least makes morally possible a photographic record of their lives.

Also, apparently by instinct, comes the little woman's yearning to leave Paradise for a more combative world. This nearly comes about when a scheming voyager and his wicked pal almost lure them and their "beads" into a civilization where pearls are of great price. But it doesn't. Inevitably, there's a hurricane and a little one, too.

That book of etiquette comes into the picture because the little girl had been playing "teatime" with it and her favorite doll when the ship blew up. It's one way of learning how to read, and when our little lady thinks of getting back to England, it's always her sharp knowledge of the little book which tells her how to behave, how to address royalty and how to converse politely.

Before it's over, they seem bound for civilization, a fact I'd like to erase from my mind. They never had it so good.

Both as youngsters and young adults, the central duo is immensely attractive, sporting about on beaches and in their jungle home.

The Technicolor camera of Geoffrey Unsworth is as eye-filling as you can wish. Though the pace is leisurely and the objective uncertain, "The Blue Lagoon" is cool escape. R. L. C.

"THE BLUE LAGOON." Universal-International release produced for J. Arthur Rank by Gilliat-Launder Productions. Screen play by Frank Launder, John Baines and Michael Hogan from the novel by H. de Vere Stacpoole. Directed by Frank Launder. Music by Clifton Parker. Photographed in Technicolor by Geoffrey Unsworth. At Keith's.

Churchill Asks Group to Delay German Action

Strasbourg, France, Aug. 17 (AP). Winston Churchill urged the European Consultative Assembily today to delay consideration of the admission of the West German Republic until a German delegation its ready to take its seats.

The former British Prime Minister's action was a surprise. He had been expected to move for prompt admission of the German republic.

Churchill asked an extraordinary session of the assembly in December or January to take up the admission of Germany.

Harold MacMillan, a leader of the British Conservative Party, explained Churchill had been persuaded it is physically impossible for a West German government to organize itself and name delegates to the assembly during the current session.

Churchill called admission of Germany "the greatest and most important of all questions that are before us."

In his speech to the 101 delegates representing 18 nations Churchill advanced two other ideas:

1. Creation of a European court before which cases of violation of human rights in the 12 nations "may be brought to the judgment of the civilized world." Such a court should not be able to enforce its decisions by sanctions, however, he said.

2. A major revision of the United Nations in which continents rather than nations would be represented.

"He said he hoped the Council of Europe "shall become one of several continental units who will form the pillars of the world instrument for maintaining security.

"I hope that in due course these continental units will be represented in the world organization collectively, rather than by individual states."

On creation of a United States of Europe, Churchill differed little from the view taken earlier by Britain's No. 2 Labor Party chief, Herbert Morrison, who urged a go-slow policy.

"We may just as well see what a girl looks like before we marry her, Churchill said.

Paz Succeeds Bramuglia In Argentina

Buenos Aires, Aug. 17. (AP).—Hipolito Jesus Paz, 32-year-old lawyer and newcomer to national affairs, took the oath yesterday as Argentine Foreign Minister. He was sworn in by President Juan Peron.

Dr. Paz

The ceremony took place in Government House in the presence of Senora Eva Duarte Peron, the president's wife, cabinet members and officers of the armed services.

Paz succeeded Juan Atilio Bramuglia, who resigned August 11, after a dispute with Jeronimo Remorino, Argentine Ambassador to Washington.

The new minister said Argentina would continue to maintain her position in world affairs often stated by President Peron. This position, he explained, places Argentina between "imperialistic capitalism" and communism.

"I am substituting for a man, not a policy," Paz said. "The international policy of the country has been outlined by President Peron, who has publicized the significance of Argentina's position."

Paz declined to answer questions about his attitude toward the United States, and evaded inquiries as to whether the bilateral trade policy of his government would be continued.

97 Teachers Due From Britain in Exchange Program

By the United Press

Ninety-seven British school teachers arrive in New York Thursday aboard the Queen Elizabeth to exchange positions for one year with United States teachers now in Britain.

The visitors, from England, North Ireland, Scotland and Wales, will teach in 85 cities in 35 States during the coming school term.

After a brief stopover in New York, they will come here for "indoctrination" courses in United States teaching methods and a visit with President Truman Tuesday. A tea at the British Embassy and the Lincoln and Jefferson memorials also are on their schedule.

Richard Strauss Ill

Herman, the Humanitarian

Coach Grins (Evilly) And His Lads Bear It

By Red Smith

Bear Mountain, N. Y., Aug. 17 (NYHT).—For an hour and a half, the football heroes of a score of colleges had been settling their breakfasts by thumping and thwacking and abusing one another on the bloody battlefield adjoining Bear Mountain Inn. They were still going at top speed when Herman Hickman told them, "all right, take a lap and go on in."

Smith

Not all of them quit immediately. A couple of teams down at the far end of the field continued to run through plays. Maybe it was zeal which kept 'em there, a burning ambition to gain regular positions on the Eastern College All-Star squad that plays the Giants for the Herald-Tribune fresh air fund at the Polo Grounds September 1. But more likely it was Mr. Hickman's assistant coaches.

"Please," Mr. Hickman cried, and his voice dripped with sweet charity. "Please don't work those boys so hard. Take it easy, lads."

Morning practice broke up, with Mr. Hickman chuckling evilly. There are practically no depths of evil into which Mr. Hickman won't plunge if it'll help get results with a football team.

"At Yale," he confessed, "I tell 'em, 'Don't over-exert, boys. Just nice, easy work. Our aim is exercise that invigorates and refreshes but does not fatigue.' 'Hurray for Hickman' they say, "that Simon Legree of a backfield coach wants to kill us all'."

"YOU USE UP a lot of backfield coaches that way," Mr. Hickman said, "but it makes for a fine, happy spirit among the boys."

"Knute Rockne had a system something like that," a fellow said. "There was a time when he was the only full-time coach at Notre Dame—he also coached indoor and outdoor track, for that matter, and was athletic director and made speeches and wrote articles and books and counted the receipts at the gate. But Hunk Anderson, who was working for an engineering firm in South Bend, would come out for a couple of hours in the afternoon to help with the linemen.

"Hunk never was, and isn't now, exactly the gentle type. He'd be giving the centers and guards and tackles hell and Rock would be working with the backs and ends on another part of the field. When Rock was ready for some scrimmage, he'd call, 'Heartley, old chap, will you bring the behemoths over, if you don't mind?'

"Hunk would go right on hounding and sweating the linemen. 'Heartley' Rock would call again, 'could we trouble you for the use of your monsters?' Still no answer from Hunk. Rock calls again, sweet as pie.

"'What the hell, Rock,' Hunk would holler, 'Wait awhile. They ain't even bleedin' yet'."

HAROLD KOPP, line coach at Yale and Bear Mountain, was approaching up the field.

"Gently, Harold," Mr. Hickman said reprovingly as Kopp neared him. "You know we don't tolerate physical contact here."

This is an old joke between them. When Kopp worked with Dick Harlow at Harvard, Harlow would tell the staff at a morning meeting: "We're going to give 'em the works this afternoon. Drive the legs off every one of them. They need a real, rugged workout."

As they flogged the slaves that afternoon, a botany professor might happen along. Dr. Harlow would greet him cordially, then turn back to the field, aghast.

"Harold!" he would cry. "Gently, gently, no physical contact. Remember these are Harvard students and gentlemen."

MR. HICKMAN HAS always admired Dr. Harlow and his methods. For that matter, he has always admired Harvard men, as a Yale coach should.

"A Harvard man," Herman would say if you pinned him down "has sound ideas. He believes in the fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of Man, and the neighborhood of Boston."

Kopp was carrying a small blackboard for diagramming plays during practice. It was obviously a toy commandeered from one of the children of Jack Martin, their host—a Donald Duck blackboard decorated with a border of small drawings, the alphabet and the cardinal numbers.

Mr. Hickman called attention to the alphabet. "Here," he said, "We are teaching fundamentals. Reminds me of Ziggy Czarobski, the Notre Dame lineman. One day when Frank Leahy was dissatisfied with a game, he called the squad together and said:

"'I see we'll have to go back to fundamentals. Now, this object I'm holding is a football.'

"'Just a minute, coach,' Czarobski said. 'Not quite so fast'."

Cards Win In 13th, 4-3, Take Lead; Bums Lose

Cincinnati, Aug. 17 (AP).—Pitcher Freddie Martin singled home Enos Slaughter from second tonight with the run which enabled the St. Louis Cardinals to defeat the Cincinnati Reds, 4-3, in 13 innings and move into undisputed possession of first place in the National League.

The victory gave the cards a half-game advantage over the Brooklyn Dodgers who lost to the Philadelphia Phillies in a day game, 11-7.

With two out in the 13th and Slaughter and Tommy Glaviano on base, manager Eddie Dyer elected not to send in a pinch batter but let Martin take his turn at the plate. The righthander promptly lined out a pay-off single.

The Cards went into an early 2-0 lead on catcher Del Rice's two-run, second inning homer. They added another in the fifth when rain halted proceedings.

Brazle had pitched hitless ball through the first four frames but, after play had been resumed in the fifth, Walker Cooper connected for a homer. The Reds got to Brazle in the sixth for two more runs on three hits to tie the score.

Phils Score 5 in 9th, Mow Down Dodgers, 11-7

Brooklyn, Aug. 17 (AP).—Brooklyn pitching fell apart today and the Dodgers went down, 11-7, before the Philadelphia Phillies.

Four Dodger hurlers dealt out three home runs and 11 bases on balls while giving up 11 hits, two less than their Dodge mates collected off a quartet of Philadelphia moundsmen.

The Dodgers had rallied in the seventh inning with three runs to tie the score at 5-5 but the Phils roared back with five more in the top of the eighth to decide the issue.

A two-run homer by pinch hitter Buddy Blattner and a double with the bases loaded by Del Ennis were the big blows in that uprising against reliever Erv Palica.

A two-run circuit smash by Bruce Edwards cut the lead to 10-7 in the Dodger half of the eighth. Then after the Phils had added another tally in the ninth, the Dodgers spoiled a last-ditch rally with some questionable base running.

Gene Hermanski had rapped his fourth straight hit, a double, and Gil Hodges had walked. With two out, Spider Jorgenson singled to right field, and when Hermanski, after making the turn at third, decided to retrace his steps he found Hodges almost on the bag. Gene broke for home but was run down for the final out.

Braves Pound 15 Hits, Stop Giants, 13-4

Boston, Aug. 17 (AP). — Righthander Vern Bickford weathered a first-inning storm and, supported by a 15-hit attack, pitched the Boston Braves to a 13-4 victory over the New York Giants tonight before a crowd of 10,093. The Tribe clinched the game with a six-run outburst in the second inning when Jimmy Russell poled a four-run homer over the left center wall.

In winning their first game under acting manager Johnny Cooney, the Tribesmen rolled up their biggest run total of the season.

Ten men went to bat in the second inning against starter, and loser, Clint Tartung and Adrian Zabala.

After picking up their seventh run in the third the Braves batted around in the fourth for four more. They picked up their other two scores in the sixth.

Cooney became acting field pilot of the Tribe just before last night's game when Billy Southworth was sent home for the remainder of the season.

Browns Upset Indians Twice, 10-6 and 5-2

St. Louis, Aug. 17 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns took both ends of a twilight-night doubleheader from the Cleveland Indians, 10 to 6 and 5 to 2, dropping the Indians to third place in the American League race.

A three-run outburst against Ol' Satchel Paige in the seventh inning brought the Browns from behind in the nightcap. They captured the first game with a four-run rally in the eighth to break a 6-6 tie.

The Brownies knocked out 13 hits in the first game and 10 in the finale, compared to a total of five in two previous night contests which ended as shutouts at the hands of the Chicago White Sox.

Scarborough Finally Solved by Bombers

Ray Pitches Great Ball—Until; Griffs Drop 7th in Row

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

New York, Aug. 17.—Faced with the choice of scoring one run in the ninth inning to tie or making two to win, the Yankees selected the latter alternative and photo finished the Nats tonight, 4-3.

The border-line victory enabled the league-leaders to keep their 3½-game bulge over the second-place Red Sox, who socked the Philadelphia Athletics.

The New York victory, accomplished before a turnout of 29,275, was a heartbreaking defeat for Ray Scarborough who was on the verge of beating the Bronx entry for the first time in his major league career.

No. 16 for Raschi

Instead, he received his tenth lacing while his pitching opponent, Vic Raschi, finally won his sixteenth game, after six tries.

Scarborough and Buddy Lewis had done a man-sized job of subduing the Yankees until the ill-fated ninth. With a home run, triple and double, Lewis had a hand in every Nat tally and Scarborough had a sparkling four-hit, 3-2, success entering the stretch inning.

Four Yankee hits and a Scarborough error, however, sent their best efforts down the drainpipe and also brought Washington its seventh straight licking when the Yankees were through with their do-or-die effort.

Catcher Gus Niarhos started the trouble with a single to left. Up came pinch-hitter Charlie Keller. He worked the count to 3-2 and then sent a line drive to right center which Gil Coan got his glove on, but couldn't hold and there were Yankees on first and second with no outs.

Wild Throw to Outfield

Phil Rizzuto, who scored an unearned run in the third inning, dropped a bunt down the third-base line. Scarborough, trying to throw to third base to force Niarhos, threw into left field instead and Niarhos came in to deadlock the game with Keller moving to third and Rizzuto to second.

Scarborough then walked Cliff Mapes. Gene Woodling then settled the issue by rapping a single to right to drive Keller in with the run that sent everybody to the exits.

Until the big blow-up, Scarborough was superb. He had the Yankees power hitters—Joe DiMaggio and Tommy Henrich—hitless and one of the two runs the Yankees owned was unearned.

With two away and Rizzuto on third in the third inning, Eddie Yost threw wild to first after fielding DiMaggio's roller. The other Yankee tally came in the second as the result of a walk to Bobby Brown, an infield out and Charlie Silvera's single.

Swinging for distance, Lewis got three of the six Nats hits off Raschi. He doubled to open the second and scored a moment later after long flies by Sam Mele and Eddie Yost.

In the fifth, Lewis tripled to left to drive in Sherry Robertson, who had walked, to tie the game at 2-2. In the 8th the 33-year-old right fielder whacked his third homer and his second in Yankee Stadium this season to present Scarborough with the 3-2 lead that the Yankees were to take away from him in the next inning. Lewis' belt landed in the eighth row of the right field bleachers, 344 feet from home plate.

IN SHORT—Sam Mele, filling in for ailing Eddie Robinson at first base, broke up two Nats rallies. He rolled into a double play with the bases loaded and only one away in the third. In the fifth, Raschi tossed him out for the side-retiring out with Lewis on third, itching to score . . . The Nats have now lost 30 out of their last 34 . . . Navy and Marine color guard units sounded taps in memory of the first anniversary of Babe Ruth's death in pre-game ceremonies . . . Before that, a street was renamed Babe Ruth Plaza back of the stadium . . . Mickey Harris (2-9) will try to win his first game as Nat in tomorrow afternoon's get-a-way day game. He'll duel Tommy Byrne (10-6) . . . Byrne was ticketed for action tonight, but was ditched at the last moment in favor of Raschi who won his first game since July 21.

4 Runs in 10th Beat Athletics For Boston, 5-1

Philadelphia, Aug. 17 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox, featuring doubles by Birdie Tebbetts and Al Zarilla, staged a four-run uprising in the tenth inning tonight to defeat the Philadelphia Athletics, 5 to 1, and move back into second place in the American League pennant race.

Rookie Charley (Chuck) Stobbs tossed a six-hitter at the Athletics to chalk up his seventh pitching decision of the year.

The Red Sox got to Dick Fowler for 10 safeties, four of them by Ted Williams. One of Williams' blows was his thirtieth home run in the first inning to send the Sox away in front.

Fowler's only walk of the game—a free ticket to first awarded Billy Goodman with one out in the tenth—started the Sox to victory. Tebbetts followed with a double to break the deadlock.

Stobbs' infield hit sent Tebbetts home. Zarilla drilled out a two-bagger for the two other counters.

Haefner Halts Tigers, 1-0, For Chisox

Chicago, Aug. 17 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox scored their third straight shutout victory tonight, edging Detroit, 1-0 before 20,919 persons.

In winning his eighth game, third for Chicago, Mickey Haefner checked the Tigers on seven hits.

Chicago collected only two hits, but needed only one to produce the game's only run in the seventh.

Young Ted Gray, a stylish lefty, was a no-hit pitcher going into the seventh when he walked Lake Appling, first up for the White Sox.

Cass Michaels sacrificed and Johnny Ostrowski, playing his first home game for the White Sox, lined Gray's second pitch into center for a single to score Appling.

After Gray was sidetracked for a pinch batter in the Detroit eighth, Art Houtteman finished for the Tigers. With one out in the home eighth Herb Adams beat out a bunt to George Kell for Chicago's second and last hit.

Detroit threatened Haefner in the ninth, loading the bases, but Johnny Lipon hit into a game-ending double play.

Erato Upsets Favorite Tagel in Stretch Run at Bel Air Opening

7-Year-Old Mare Pays Off $25.40

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bel Air, Md., Aug. 17.—A winning streak of four favorites was broken in the featured Bel Air inaugural purse, the fifth event on the opening day program.

S. M. Follin's Erato, away from the winner's circle since mid-May at Charles Town, came on with a stretch rush to defeat, among others, A. W. Messersmith's Tagel, the heavily played favorite in a field of nine. Third money went to L. F. Pondfield's Silver Money.

Those in a crowd of 6500 (larger than a year ago) who backed the winning 7-year-old mare collected at the rate of $25.40 for the usual duece investment. Erato, in winning her third purse in 18 starts this year, registered a time of 1:27 3/5 for the seven furlongs and was capably handled by Jockey Johnny Ulmer.

Tagel did the expected and went to the front at the break. A variety of horses occupied the second position during the running, but Erato was there in the stretch. Roused by Ulmer, the old mare gathered momentum and disposed of the public choice by a neck margin in the concluding strides.

The program opened mildly enough. W. G. Myers' Bridle Path whipped seven other two-year-olds in the first event while under the handling of the aforementioned Ulmer. The filly paid $6.40 and set the stage for a $14.20 daily double completed when W. E. Ferrell's Wee Singer romped away with the second event at a $4.40 mutuel.

Jockey Carty Meyerhoffer, Washington, D. C., boy who suffered a broken collar bone at Charles Town, celebrated his return to the saddle by winning the fourth race, his first mount since his mishap. He brought Justin Funkhouser's Super Flight from far back to win going away to the tune of a $7.60 mutuel.

The day's secondary feature proved another success for the favorite players. Johnny Tammaro, leading rider on the Maryland minor circuit at this time, brought Harmony Hope along to win with daylight to spare over J. Goodwin's Brazil with Miss M. D. Weitzel's Hoseah third. Harmony Hope was clocked in 1:47 1-5 for the mile and a sixteenth and returned a $4.40 mutuel.

OUT AT PLATE—Washington Catcher Don Wilbur slaps the ball on Allentown's (Pa.) Don Chleboue in a fourth-inning play during yesterday's Boys' Club all-star baseball game at Fairlawn Field. Chleboue tried to score from second on Bob De Each's single, but a fine throw from Rightfielder Mickey Meinke cut down Don at the plate. Allentown won, 11-3

Washington Boys Lose, 11-3

Allentown, Pa., gained revenge yesterday by whipping Washington, 11-3, in a Boys' Club all-star game at Fairlawn Field.

In a game last Saturday in Allentown, Washington scored a 4-1 victory. Roy Bender pitched the route for Allentown, giving up nine hits.

He missed getting a shutout when Washington clipped him for three runs in the last of the ninth.

Buddy Jones was the losing pitcher.

Five Anacostia Golfers Qualify

Anacostia yesterday qualified three boys and two girls for the city-wide public links tournament Tuesday at East Potomac. Norman English, Ray Martin, Lloyd Gregg, Lorraine Collins and Diane Hinchey completed the field for the tournament. East Potomac, Rock Creek and Fort Dupont held their qualifying rounds earlier.

Caps Beat Marx, 3-2, Tie Series

The Washington Capitols put together two walks, a single, and a pair of errors for two runs in the ninth inning for a 3-2 victory over the Marx Jewelers yesterday on the Ellipse to knot the series for the National City Junior League championship at one-all. The third game will be played this afternoon at 5 o'clock on the West Ellipse.

Leo Speros hit a home run for the winners and Bob Stewart hurled five-hit ball and fanned eight men for the Caps.

Cuban Starts Channel Swim Try

Cape Griz Nez, France (Thursday), Aug. 18 (AP).—Jose Cortinas, 32-year-old Cuban, started swimming across the English Channel this morning at 12:45 a. m. (6:45 p. m., Eastern standard time, Wednesday.)

Cortinas said he hoped to beat the men's channel record of 11½ hours.

"I promised the crew of the boat accompanying me to double their pay if I beat the record," he added.

The price for the craft is 40,000 francs ($120), and Cortinas said he would pay 80,000 francs if he succeeds in making a new mark.

Cortinas, stocky, 190-pound Cuban clothing store proprietor, said he was sorry Shirley May France, American girl swimmer, was not going along with him.

"I regret she didn't go," he said, "because I would have liked to have someone to talk to."

Shirley May's attempt to conquer the channel was postponed yesterday because a stiff breeze kicked up whitecaps. She is staying at a seaside resort near Calais, France, and may make her effort this afternoon.

Shirley May's Progress Will Be Broadcast

A special series of eyewitness reports of the progress of Shirley May France will highlight the WOL coverage of the 17-year-old Somerset, Mass., girl's attempt to conquer the rough waters of the English Channel.

WOL reporter Stephen Grenfell will be aboard the official party boat which will accompany Shirley on her swim. He will broadcast, via shortwave, hourly reports on her condition, progress as well as activitiees aboard ship as it plows slowly across the channel. He will also interview her father, her manager, and her trainer en route.

Favorites Win In Doubles

Brookline, Mass., Aug. 17 (AP).—Wimbledon victors "Pancho" Gonzales and Frankie Parker were given a rough time in the third round of the National Doubles Tennis Tournament, but outlasted Arnold Saul of San Diego, Calif., and Jack Tuero of New Orleans, for a 6—4, 2—6, 3—6, 7—5, 8—6 decision today at Longwood.

All the other favored men's teams moved into the quarter-finals under much more comfortable circumstances.

Gardnar Mulloy and Billy Talbert, the defending champs, passed Al Everts and Don Manchester, from nearby Newton, 6—1, 7—5, 6—1.

All four members of the British Wightman Cup Team were ousted as the women stars reduced their division to the semifinals.

Defenders Louise Brough and Mrs. Margaret Osborne Dupont overwhelmed Mrs. Betty Hilton and Kay Tuckey, 6—4, 6—0, and the other British girls, Mrs. Molly Blair and Jean Quertier, bowed to Doris Hart of Miami, and Shirley Fry of Akron, Ohio, 6—4, 6—1.

Region F Wins Recreation Archery

Region F of Anacostia won the D. C. Recreation Department's girls junior archery tournament yesterday with 460 points at Hearst playground. Beverly Newman of Takoma had high score with 138 points, including four bull's eyes.

The senior mixed doubles title went to Region D with 786 points. High scorer was Johnny Joy with 159. Joy is from Chevy Chase Community House.

Annandale Ousts Scogna, 4-1

Annandale eliminated Scogna, 4-1, in the double elimination District of Columbia Amateur Softball Association Tournament last night at Greenbelt. In the second game of the doubleheader, the Southeast Businessmen ousted Galliher-Huguely, 8-2. Mike Lieb hurled four-hit ball for the Businessmen.

Tonight at 7:30, Greenbelt faces Hillcrest and at 9:15 Kavakos squares off against Eig's Liquors.

Leone Nails Superman In Turner Wrestling

Michele Leone reversed the script again last night before a crowd of 2400 at Turner's Arena when he defeated the favored Golden Superman for the second straight time here. Superman was disqualified after 17 minutes of the main bout.

In the semi-windups, Violet Viann defeated Cecilia Bevins and Nell Stewart defeated Helen Hild.

Ken Marriott Wins Stock Car Feature

Ken Marriott of Baltimore won the 20-lap feature of the stock car races last night at West Lanham for the second consecutive week. Frank Schneider Lambertville, N. J., was in second and Wally Campbell, the favorite from Trenton, took third. Marriott's winning time was 5:33.40.

Washington Pair Loses in Tennis

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 17.—The last Washington chances in the National Parks Tennis championship were smashed today when Phillippe Neff and Frank Cantwell lost to Leonard Prosser and Alex George from Kansas City, Mo., 6—2, 6—2, 6—2.

N. L. Stars Sign With AAC Club

New York, Aug. 17 (AP).—Three former National Football League players were signed today by the Brooklyn-New York Yankees of the All-America Conference, intensifying the rivalry between the two big professional football leagues.

They are John Mastrangelo, formerly of the Pittsburgh Steelers, Robert Dobelstein of the New York Giants, and Reid Moseley of the Chicago Bears.

All three, said the Yankee announcement, were free agents following the breakdown of contract negotiations.

In Philadelphia, a spokesman for the National Football League emphasized that none of the three "jumped the league." He said options on 1949 contracts had not been taken up by their NFL clubs and that they were free to bargain with whomever they pleased.

The Fisherman's Angle

Nor'easter Fails to Halt Cobia Catches; Carful of Huge Croakers Nabbed on Bay

By Ralph Murdock

THE NOR'EASTER which started early Sunday morning has thrown quite a damper on our fishing friends. Not in spirit but in actual fish caught. Saturday turned out to be a banner day for the salt water fisherman on the bay. But old man weather threw the clamps on and numerous anglers were forced to get under cover on the eastern side of the Potomac where the waters are the smoothest.

Murdock

Yesterday should have been termed "cobia day." Here are some very interesting reports on cobia. No doubt, most of our local anglers recently have suffered the humiliation of reeling in a bunch of empty hooks.

If they had not been cleared, you came up with a "croaking" hardhead that measured at least 3 inches from his nose to the folk of his tale. There was nothing you could do to eliminate the situation. In other words before a sizeable fish could get an opportunity to hit your line you either had a throwaway or a "rebait" for a bare hook.

HERE'S WHERE the cobia sneaks into the picture. Instead of letting the miniature hardheads get you down to their size (3 inches) why not take a fling at some of those cobias that are being taken on the Southeast middle ground? Nine were taken in one day that averaged over 65 pounds each. Three other reached the 75-pound mark.

You don't have to travel far to enjoy the sport. Boats leaving St. Jerome's Creek, Smith's Creek and the lower Potomac will put you on the fishing grounds. The world's record for cobia was 102 pounds.

But G. M. Williams, while fishing off York Split, has just captured a giant cobia that might shatter the record providing the catch is officially recognized. The monster hit the "Fairbanks" at 113 pounds. The fish was taller than the average man, a mere 5 feet, 9 inches. All in all, it should a tremendous year for this species of gamesters.

W. A. Cole, his daughter, Anna, 18, and Elizabeth Myer, 19, drove by the home of the writer to show their catch of jumbo hardheads taken practically in our own backyard. In the trunk of their car, we saw 11 of the biggest croakers we've gazed upon in some time.

Mr. Cole explained, "We were aboard an outboard motorboat and caught them during midday. They hit both shrimp and bloodworm. Betty hooked something that snapped her line. We caught them while we were drifting in 25 feet of water.

THE EVIDENCE was so impressive that we could not resist. John A. Clarke (my fishing sidekick who has a strong back and usually carries the motor), Clarence Duckett and myself quickly headed for the spot where Mr. Cole had landed the whoppers.

The tip proved an excellent one for we hauled in 21 giant size croakers. These hardheads are heavier than the croakers now being caught in 4 or 5 feet of water. They average 3 pounds each while the species in shoal water ranged between 1½ to 2 pounds.

Blue Channel Crabs, the best of the current season are now showing up in the Bay area. Capt. Will (Cowboy) Collins, at the County Wharf at Herring Bay vouches for this news. Captain Bill, incidentally carried out the first fishing party from this spot 32 years ago. He is still engaged in commercial crabbing and catches his share of the rockfish when trolling for the big stripers.

Giles Wilkinson, Lucien Bruce and James Cross of the Recordak Corp. in the District and Dr. J. C. Bruce of Gordonsville, Va. have just arrived from Oregon Inlet where a haul of 82 Bluefish was boated by the foursome. Capt. Charlie Perry did the steering honors.

Weekend Fishing Suggestions

Where they are hitting:

HARDHEADS — Eastern Bay Area best bet. A single catch of 98 giant size taken Tuesday. Now in deeper water approximately 20 to 30 foot depths.

ROCKFISH—Mouth of Chester River for the tackle busters. Holland Point also good.

TROUT—Point Lookout area should be best, also mouth of Patuxent River. Use peelers.

BLUEFISH—Solomon's Island to Point Lookout producing the largest catches. Trolling is the best method.

SPOT—Cornfield Harbor best bet. Spot catches have begun to drop off. Bloodworm still best bait.

amazing analysis of the individual incomes of the farmers in this county of 100,000 population last year:

There were 146 with gross incomes of $50,000 to $100,000.

There were about 468 with incomes ranging from $25,000 to $50,000.

There were probably 1200 between $15,000 and $35,000.

Not Limited to Maine.

These fabulous incomes for operating family-sized farms were not limited to Maine. Congress, in its open-hearted generosity, extended similiar prosperity to nearly all States.

For instance, in little Rhode Island, where they only raised 1,462,000 hundredweight as compared with 73 million in Maine, there were only 34 commercial farms that qualified for price support. Their average sales to the Government was more than $25,000, a farm. The mean in Maine was $15,000 for 4503 farms.

In Connecticut, 82 eligible farmers got an average of $15,625 from sales to the Government. New York, New Jersey, California average about the same.

The average for the entire country was well above $7000. There were 28,444 eligible farmers, and payments to farmers from the Government totaled $199,272,400. Only a small minority of potato growers in 1948 sold to the Government, in spite of the terrific gross CCC bought. This is pointed out emphatically in a statement Brannan sent to the Maine area recently.

Protested by Department

He also emphasized that the expensive program was ordered by Congress over the department's continued protests.

"Mandatory price supports, carried out to effectuate the congressional order, have held up the market for all potato producers and not just for the relatively few commercial farms which complied with all eligibility requirements and sold potatoes directly to the Government in the course of price support operations," Brannan stated. He then added these enlightening statistics:

"It is estimated that about one and three-quarter million farms produce some potatoes, and that at least 370,000 of these grow more than an acre and therefore produce for sale.

"In 1948, actual purchases were made from only 28,000 commercial producers. The entire burden of making price supports effective fell on the program operations with this limited group. The fact remains, however, that the market was supported for all potato growers, whether they met the carefully defined eligibility requirements or not and whether they sold to the Government or on the open market."

Brannan also didn't overlook the opportunity the Maine situation presents, to argue that his "production payment program" commonly known as the Brannan farm plan, would have brought the same benefits to the potato grower and also would have given the consumer cheaper potatoes.

Growers and buyers alike here admit almost to a man that they expect the present price support method of farm aid to eventually be knocked out by public opinion. They can see no hope for a program that taxes the public billions of dollars to keep retail prices that the same public pays for food at record peace-time highs. But that doesn't mean that they are sold on the Brannan plan.

After the Government paid more than 199 million dollars for 80 million hundredweight of potatoes last year, it had to spend another 25 million dollars to give them away, mainly for transportation.

That last 25 million could have been saved. Either the potatoes could have been destroyed, or, even at a greater savings, left in the ground. That was what farmers often did before Congress invented price supports.

In 1946, both methods were used to a small extent. But the protest rocked the country. The records reveal that the two most vociferous in denouncing such methods were two who are generally most vocal in demands for governmental economies.

Both come from potato-growing States, and both are Republicans.

Senator Owen Brewster of Maine demanded officially that the then Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson, now Senator from New Mexico, halt the destruction.

Representative August Andresen of Minnesota headed a House Agriculture Subcommittee that was sharply critical of the department's niggardliness with potato farmers. (The department spent only 90 million on potatoes in 1946.

The potato program for the year that ended June 30 thus cost a cool 225 million dollars—almost a quarter of a billion.

That's twice the cost of the District of Columbia. In fact, the program in Maine alone cost one-third the cost of Washington's Municipal government.

It is more than the cost of the Department of Labor, or Commerce, and about the same as the Department of Justice.

It is more than one-fourth the entire cost of the Department of Agriculture, or the atomic energy program.

The public can learn each year what the price support program for potatoes costs because they can be stored only a brief period.

What will the total support price program amount to when the bills are all in for the major crops, such as wheat, corn, cotton, peanuts, etc.? That gives agriculturists pause.

(Farmers are taught how to grow more potatoes for which no profitable commercial demand exists. See John W. Ball's fifth article Friday.)

ITU President Given Say on All Contracts

Oakland, Calif., Aug. 17 (AP).—The International Typographical Union turned over to President Woodruff Randolph today the final say-so on all employer contracts affecting ITU's 87,000 members.

The ninety-first convention also voted a pension for the $10,000-a-year president, three $7500 vice presidents and secretary-treasurer; and ITU office employes. The officers will receive $10 a week for each two-year terms.

Randolph urged passage of the pension measure.

"If this proposition doesn't carry," Randolph told delegates, "I'll never open my face about pensions again any place."

Approval by voice vote came after the convention agreed to increase weekly payments for ITU's 7000 pensioners from $15 to $16.

Opponents tried to limit the officers' pension to the same amount. They were shouted down.

ITU Vice President Elmer Brown of New York urged empowering Randolph to pass on all local contracts. He said this was designed to prevent "weak-kneed officers and committees from submitting to publishers."

A vocal minority cried out against yielding autonomy. One delegate declared, "this is not dynamite, it's an atomic bomb!"

But as with everything else so far in the four-day-old meeting, the bulk of the 300-odd delegates supported Randolph with a firm hand.

Seen as Rebuke to Some

Randolph interpreted the 258-to-50 vote as a rebuke to locals which have refused to abide by ITU policy—based on caustic opposition to the Taft-Hartley Labor Act.

The ITU constitution previously prohibited locals from signing agreements not in conformity with union laws. The amendment expressly provides that proposed contracts—and any employer counter-offer—must first be approved by Randolph.

Veterans Warned Of Phony GI Refund Forms

By the United Press

Veterans were warned yesterday that swindlers are peddling phony application blanks to veterans for filing claims for refunds on national service life insurance.

The Veterans Administration said the bogus blanks, reportedly being sold for 50 cents to $1 each, will not be accepted when a $2,800,000,000 dividend kitty is divided up among 16 million World War II veterans beginning next January.

VA said its own genuine application forms will be available August 29 at postoffices, VA offices and at veterans' organizations They will be free.

The agency said it already has received and thrown out about 100 spurious blanks. The veterans who sent them in will not get their bonus checks unless they refile on the official forms.

Chilean Mobs Protest Bus Fare Increases

Santiago, Chile, Aug. 17 (AP).—Police fired over the heads of three crowds of demonstrators and used tear gas today to break up street disorders over bus fare increases of half a cent.

The government said it had found Communist literature outlining a "seditious plan" for disorders in connection with the bus fare protests.

Business Unit Gives Approval to Chest Drive

Federation Votes To Continue Its Efforts to Improve Local Organization

The Federation of Business Men's Associations last night indorsed the coming Community Chest campaign, but declared its intention of continuing to work for improvements in the Chest organization.

The action was taken following submission of a favorable report on the condition of the Chest by Acting President Jerome McKee and an unfavorable one by Secretary Louis E. Frick. McKee and Frick, with Dr. Ben Striner represented the federation on the citizens committee which made recommendations for reorganization of the Chest structure in 1947.

Approval of the resolution supporting the campaign was made by a voice vote, with Frick the lone dissenter. The resolution was offered by J. Nelson Anderson, delegate from the New Center Market Dealers Association.

Strives for Improvement

It read in part: "Be it resolved that the Federation of Business Men's Associations actively indorse the coming drive and aid it in every way possible to make it a success, it being understood that in so doing the Federation, through its legally constituted committee, will continue to urge upon the management of the Chest the correction of such inequities as may still exist therein."

Its preamble recognized that "forward steps have been taken . . . toward the correction of certain objectionable features," and that "the success of the drive is of vital concern to every resident and businessman of the District."

McKee, in urging support of the Chest campaign, declared the Chest has done "a magnificent job in correcting conditions and placing limitations" on its agencies.

Cites Offer

He cited the Chest's "open handed offer to put all its cards on the table" and its "complete willingness for representatives of the Federation of Business Men's Associations to participate on boards of agencies and on the United Community Services budget committee."

Frick emphatically denounced the failure of the chest to eliminate from participation 14 of the 15 agencies singled out by the citizens committee as "performing no charity (under) the general public conception thereof." One of the agencies voluntarily withdrew, he said, but the others remain today.

He conceded that the Chest "basically does a lot of good," but contended that "some persons oppose the entire Chest because of the presence of some controversial organizations."

Others speaking in favor of indorsement included J. A. Kamerow, president of the American Business Association; Frederick Levy, American Business Association; C. E. Seibert, Southeast Business Men's Association, and Arthur Clarendon Smith, past president of the federation.

The 14 agencies recommended for elimination which are still included in the Chest are: the Animal Rescue League, Children's Protective Association, District Social Hygiene Association, District Society for the Prevention of Blindness, Foster Day Care and Counseling Service, Legal Aid Society, National Youth Hostels, Washington Criminal Justice Association, Washington Federation of Churches (Social Service Department), Washington Heart Association, Washington Housing Association, Washington Urban League, Young Men's Christian Association and Young Women's Christian Association. The agency which voluntarily withdrew after publication of the report, according to Frick, was the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club.

Jerry Kluttz is on vacation. His column, the Federal Diary, will be resumed next Tuesday.

Analysis Set In Poisoning Of Girl, 4

Analysis of body fluids of a 4-year-old Hyattsville girl who died Saturday of lead poisoning was asked yesterday by Prince Georges General Hospital authorities.

The child, Claudette Garver, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude L. Garver, 4503 Decatur st., died a few hours after she was admitted to the hospital.

Her parents told doctors at the hospital she ate paint from the walls and furniture.

This is not an uncommon habit of children, according to Dr. John T. Maloney, county medical examiner, and may be caused by a vitamin deficiency or simply by an inordinate desire to chew.

Following a post-mortem, Dr. Maloney issued a certificate of death from chronic lead poisoning. Because there was no evidence of ingestion of large quantities of poison—no scars on internal organs—specimens of body fluids were sent to the National Institute of Health in Bethesda for analysis.

A sister, Elizabeth, 3, was taken to Children's Hospital a short time before with similar symptoms, but had been returned home Saturday, the day Claudette died. According to the parents, the younger child at one time chewed on the furniture, too, but had given up the habit.

Another member of the Garver household, Mrs. Margaret Anderson, also is in Prince Georges General Hospital with a stomach disorder, but Dr. Maloney said last night she was not suffering from the same ailment.

The Garvers have two other children, Esther, 7, and John Wayne, 19 months. Garver is a signalman for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

Bethesda Man Drowns Swimming From Yacht

Alvin G. Pettit, 55-year-old salesman for May's Brake Service, 21 H st. ne., who lives at 13 Kentbury Way, Bethesda, was fatally stricken when swimming off Colonial Beach yesterday.

Pettit had entered the water from a yacht. He was seen struggling by friends aboard, was pulled out and died a few minutes later. A doctor said the cause of death apparently was a heart attack.

Voodoo Magic

Larceny Case Results in Nolle Pros

Jesse Hicks is still "uncrossed," his stomach aches if he dines too lavishly before bedtime and he's lost all faith in voodoo magic.

All of which led to the arrest Tuesday night of John Hale, Jr., 56, of 608 O st. nw. at Hicks' house, 420 New York ave. nw.

Police charged Hale with grand larceny by trick but Assistant United States Attorney Andrew Howard yesterday nolle prossed the charge.

Hicks, who is 36, told police Hale came to his house on July 19 and told him he had been "fixed."

"But I am the man and I can uncross you," Hale assured him, Hciks said.

Hicks said he gave Hale $76 in bills and three pennies and in return received two "mojos"—Chamois bags, each of which contained an eel skin, some roots and a dime.

Hicks was also given a live terrapin and burnt salt. He was told to sprinkle the salt about the house every Monday.

Hicks said Hale was back the following week. No, he hadn't been "uncrossed" yet. Okay, $10 more and a little patience.

When Hale returned again Tuesday night, Hicks called police. Yesterday he explained to the Assistant United States Attorney why he had lost his faith in the "healer."

Hicks explained that he suffers from indigestion. His doctor advised him against heavy meals before retiring. But with Hale on his side, Hicks said, he figured he could eat as much as he wanted. But the "mojos" didn't stop that indigestion.

When Hale was taken into custody by police he had in his possession, they said, a bottle containing terrapin toes, eel skins, dogs' teeth, beetles and mice livers.

Howard said he was nolle prossing the case because the evidence against Hale was weak, and, anyway, the magic man had agreed to return the money to Hicks.

Zoning Board Approves GU Language Unit

The District Board of Zoning Adjustment yesterday cleared the way for establishment of a unique Institute of Lauguages and Linguistics at the Georgetown School of Foreign Service next month.

The board, acting on the plea of Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S.J., regent of the school, approved establishment of the Institute at 1717-19 Massachusetts ave. nw, for a trial period of three years with the condition that classes not be held after 9 p. m.

The Institute will train men in interpretation for state and professional needs, giving a three-year course to 200 students. One year will be spent in a foreign university under special arrangement, Dr. Walsh explained.

New techniques similar to the simultaneous interpretation system of the United Nations and the methods developed by the armed forces during the war for teaching language will be used.

The board deferred action until the next board meeting, September 28, on an appeal by the Foundation Farthest Out to establish an office and provide lodging at 1720 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Frank Olmstead, head of the foundation, told the board arrangements had been made to purchase the structure if approved. He said the group is interested in prayer and hopes to arouse higher motives than mere politics in the country's legislators by bringing them the message of religion.

The foundation previously was quartered in a three-story home at 535 Cedar st. nw., but the board denied an appeal to continue operations there after neighbors objected that groups were housed there during visits to Washington.

In other actions, the board:

Approved, conditionally, a request by Edna F. and Robert L. Owen to establish a preschool program for eight children at 2915 13th st. ne.

Denied an appeal by the Park Road Community Church for permission to erect a church addition at 1019 Park rd. nw.

Denied a request by Louis Perna & Sons, Inc., to erect a two-story office building at 1137 24th st. nw.

Approved a request by the Georgetown Development Corp. to convert a structure at 3308 R st. nw. into a single-family dwelling.

Cut in Funds Would Slash Day Care

2 or 3 of 6 Centers Threatened by Pending $50,000 Provision, Clapp Says

Two or three of the six District day-care centers will have to be closed if the appropriation for next year is cut to $50,000, as threatened, Raymond F. Clapp, acting director of the Public Welfare Department, warned last night.

Congress has authorized $100,000, which was $50,000 less than appropriated for the current year. However, the House Appropriations Committee on Tuesday approved an appropriation of only $50,000. This action will be referred to the House floor soon, then to the Senate.

Under the authorization of June 21, fees from parents, scaled to ability to pay, will go toward operation of the centers, instead of being directed, as heretofore, into the general city revenues.

The Welfare Department originally estimated fees this year would approximate $48,000.

If the appropriation of $50,000 is approved by both houses, Acting Welfare Director Clapp forecast two alternative retrenchment actions:

1. If the present policy of giving preference to children of parents least able to pay is continued, fees would only amount to about one-third of cost. This would probably mean $25,000 in fees, plus the appropriation. A total of $75,000, a 50 per cent cut in funds available the past year, would mean operation of only three of the six centers.

2. If fees are raised so that they average one half the cost of operation—thus curtailing service to those least able to pay—some $50,000 might be received in fees. Added to a $50,000 appropriation, this would mean a one third cut in service—operation of four of the six centers.

Either alternative would mean some mothers might have to quit work and go on relief; or park children with relatives or in institutions—or just let the youngsters roam the streets, Clapp pointed out.

Currently some 265 youths from the ages of 2 to about 10 are accommodated at the centers which operate 12 hours a day, Miss Lucille Lewis, day care center superintendent said. They receive regular day nursery care—planned recreation, play, naps and food.

Taxpayers Told Where Money Goes

Montgomery County is including a bit of public relations with its current mailing of real estate tax bills.

Leaflets included with the bills explain to taxpayers in graphs how the county's operating and capital improvement budgets are broken down.

Of an estimated $7,907,574 revenue in the 1949-50 budget, 89.63 per cent will come from real estate, personal property and other local taxes.

On the expenditure side of the ledger, the graphs explain, 45.43 per cent of state and local funds will go for education, with 11.05 per cent slated to retire school debt.

Highways will get 11.55 per cent, public safety 8.63 per cent, welfare 2.26 per cent, finance department 2.86, and administration 1.87 per cent.

2500 at Marshall Hall See Jouster Win Without a Miss

By Ben Bradlee
Post Reporter

Sir Knight of Soldiers' Delight (Joe Brady of Baltimore County, Md.), speared the most rings at Marshall Hall Park yesterday to win the sixty-fourth annual jousting tournament.

In response to the tournament marshal's "Sir Knight, prepare to charge," and "Charge, Sir Knight," Brady rode full tilt at 15 rings an inch or less in diameter and missed not a one.

More than 2500 persons watched 22 riders of all ages compete in the historic games.

The twentieth century knights spent more than four hours aiming the sharp points of their 7½-foot, 10-pound lances at the tiny rings. One woman tried her hand at the age-old sport. She, Maid Mary Lou Bartram, took fourth place.

The tournament jousting course is 100 yards long, lined on each side by parked automobiles and spectators. At regular intervals three large rectangular frames bridge the course. From each arch more than seven feet from the ground, are suspended steel arms. At the end of these arms, rings of progressively smaller size are inserted for the knights to spear. As the jousting starts the rings are one-inch in diameter. Three-quarter inch rings replace them, and in the final round the mounted knights charge at rings only one-half inch across.

The knights carry home-made spears, which are handed down within families from generation to generation, spears that are veterans of hundreds of hours of practice on the farm. Throughout the year the contestants charge similar rings suspended from barns.

Jousting is a difficult art. The course must be negotiated in at least nine seconds, a pace that requires the horses to gallop. The riders must stand in their stirrups to keep on the required even keel. At that speed, a thumbnail looks enormous as compared with the rings.

Tournament chairman A. D. Langley, a veteran of 52 years of jousting, eyed the younger crop of jousters with approval. He retired three years ago after the death of his carefully trained jousting horse.

Prizes amounting to $100 were distributed to the top 10 performers. Brady pocketed $35 for his winning effort. He also won the privilege of crowning the queen of last night's ball.

Sir Knight of Blue Ribbon, Waldron Burtner, won second place, and John Crooks came in third.

Other competitors, all of whom are required by tradition to wear bright colored blouses and scarfs, included: Lawrence Gates, J. H. Burtner, J. F. Love, Douglas Parran, who thrilled the crowd as he charged under the frames at breakneck speed, George Bartrum, Brook Kelsey, David Gates, R. E. Crooks, Edward Gibbons, Ernest Gates, James Woodburn, John Earnshaw, Jerry Daniels, Howard Gates, Philip Clark, Gordon Blaine, Nathan Sellers and Henry Fowler.

County Tracts Rezoned for Apartments

Two large tracts near New Hampshire ave. at Avenel in Prince Georges County yesterday were approved for apartment house construction.

The Prince Georges County Commissioners sanctioned rezoning of a 36-acre tract on Pisgah Church rd., at the Montgomery County line, owned by Lillian Turner. The land, according to T. Howard Duckett, attorney, will be the site of a 300-unit garden type apartment project costing $1,800,000.

Also rezoned was a 27-acre area near New Hampshire ave. and Metzerott rd., adjacent to the Turner tract. It is opposite an existing apartment development, and is owned by Nellie M. Phillips. Plans for development have not been completed, Duckett said.

Rehearing of a zoning request for apartments near Kenilworth was continued until Wednesday.

The commissioners already have granted apartment zoning for an 11-acre tract there, but slated the rehearing when the Beaver Heights Citizens Association voiced opposition.

Home Rule To Come Up Again in Full Committee

Supporters Hope, At Friday Session, To Get Bill Out Of Pigeonhole

The Washington home-rule issue—shelved Tuesday by the Harris subcommittee—will come up for another go-around before the full House District Committee at an 11 a. m. Friday meeting.

The unexpectedly early call of the committe was announced by Chairman McMillan (D., S. C.).

He indicated the chief purpose of the Friday session was to hear Representative Harris (D., Ark.) report on his subcommittee's decision Tuesday to table the Senate-passed Kefauver home-rule bill.

Meanwhile, a bipartisan group of home-rule proponents on the full committee disclosed that they will make a fight at the Friday meeting to reverse the Harris subcommittee's "pigeonholing" action.

May Discharge Subcommittee

After a strategy huddle yesterday, Representative Klein (D., N. Y.) said he will offer a motion to discharge the Harris group from further consideration of the suffrage issue. If the motion carries, the full committee would then have a chance to send the Senate-passed bill or any other pending home-rule measure to the House floor. Klein is author of a House bill identical to the Kefauver measure.

"The subcommittee's action on home rule is most undemocratic," said Klein. "The least it can do is let the full committee decide the issue, particularly since a majority of the House membership are favorable to Washington home rule. If we get a chance to vote Friday, I'm sure we can reverse the Harris group," Klein said.

Others Not So Confident

Other proponents were not so confident yesterday that they had the votes in the 25-member full committee to reverse the subcommittee and send a suffrage bill to the House floor.

After an informal poll the Democrats estimated they could count on at least five pro-home rule votes on their side in committee and the Republicans guessed they might have a possible six.

The bloc leading the home-rule drive include Representatives Buchanan (D., Pa.), Kennedy (D., Mass.), Klein (D., N. Y.), and Granger (D., Utah), and Auchincloss (R., N. J.).

Failing to vote a bill out of committee in this session of Congress, proponents have already served notice that they will start a discharge petition to send it directly to the floor. To be successful the petition must carry 218 signatures—or a majority—of the House membership.

Home Rule Opponents Send Harris 'Video Set'

By The Associated Press

A grinning porter delivered a large box yesterday to the office of Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.).

Mindful of the current talk about deep freezers, Harris eyed the box gingerly, read a note taped to the box and then opened the bulky package.

Inside was what appeared to be a television set. On examination, however, it turned out to be a cardboard shell carefully painted to resemble a television set.

The note, on paper from which the letterhead had been cut, said that "We, the members of the newly formed National Association Against Home Rule for the District of Columbia" were sending him a television set because of "the noble work you have done."

"We had hoped," said the note, "to send you a deep freezer, but it was decided that due to the unpopular publicity which certain men in high office are now receiving, it was deemed advisable for the present at least not to send any deep freezers."

Harris chuckled. "I've got a pretty good idea who is pulling my leg. I'll find out," he vowed.

Hundreds Gamble Openly at Amusement Park on Potomac

Money Piled High For Illegal Game Of 'Over and Under'

"It's a money game for money players."

That was the cry that drew hundreds to a friendly little game of "Over and Under" yesterday at Marshall Hall, an amusement park on the Potomac River opposite Mount Vernon.

"Over and Under" is an illegal dice game in which you bet that a throw will be over, or under, or exactly, seven. You get paid even money if you win an over or under bet, four to one if you call the throw of a seven.

The actual odds are seven to five on winning an over or under bet and six to one on a winning seven.

More than $100 in change and more in bills were stacked on the "Over and Under" table yesterday, halfway between the jousting tournament course and the amusement arcade.

Sheriff Elmer M. Quade of Charles County, Md., last night said the game was illegal. He was a member of the committee on arrangements for yesterday's jousting tournament, but was confined to his bed in Mechanicsville. Sheriff Quade said he had not heard that an "Over and Under" game was operating at the park this summer. He said he would inspect the game himself as soon as he was well.

Another money game, inside the amusement arcade was attracting fewer customers. This involved a giant wheel, marked with three dice combinations. Bettors placed their money ("There's no limit here," cried the shill) on numbers engraved in an oilcloth sheet in front of the booth. The operator of this game also served occasionally as "croupier" for the "Over and Under" game.

Inside the arcade, 21 slot machines, now legal in Charles County, played to capacity crowds, often lined four deep waiting for a chance to pump in their change. Fifteen machines took nickels, three dimes, and two quarters. There was one 50 cent machine.

A large sign over the machines noted that the law restricted players to those over 16. No violations were observed.

Sewer Plan Threat Denied by Fairfax

By Judith Spivak
Post Reporter

A Falls Church threat to cease using Fairfax County sewage disposal facilities will not affect a proposed three-million-dollar sewer bond issue in adjacent county territory, Fairfax officials said yesterday.

Fairfax has been receiving a $2 payment yearly from the city for each of about 1800 Falls Church units connected with a trunk line sewer in the county.

The Falls Church Council voted Monday to investigate alternate proposals (1) to build its own sewage disposal plant or (2) to dump its sewage into Arlington County lines.

Increase Proposed

Councilman J. H. McCarthy told the council Fairfax has proposed to increase its disposal rates to the city from $2 to $24 yearly for each unit, if the sewage improvement bond issue is approved August 30 by Fairfax voters in Sanitary District No. 1.

This would force the city to increase its present $19-a-year rates to city householders to a "ridiculous" $36 a year, McCarthy said.

McCarthy said the county "won't be able to hold up their end" of the proposed bond issue if the city withdraws its patronage.

But Fairfax officials are far from agreeing.

The city provides only 13.5 per cent of the county's total sewer revenue at present, according to Fairfax Sanitary Engineer J. A. Corbalis.

He estimated only 5 square miles (or 1-3) of the territory Falls Church hopes to annex is included in Sanitary District Number 1, which totals 30 square miles.

Puts Average at $12.36

Corbalis also said charges to the city for sewage disposal, if averaged over the 30-year-life of the bond issue, will average only about $12.36 yearly for each connected unit, though they will be higher in the first few years.

Corbalis said also he "doubts seriously" whether the State Health Department will permit construction of a disposal plant in Falls Church, since it would empty into streams feeding the Alexandria's water supply.

Falls Church City Manager Roy F. Dunn said, however, that he saw no reason why the city can't build its plant in Fairfax, since "the court has said the county could own schools in the city."

Dunn told the council Monday he favored the proposal to build a sewage plant, since Arlington is considering a bond issue itself, and may then raise the rates quoted at present.

Dunn said a million-dollar bond issue would cost the city only $67,000 yearly in interest and payment on principal. The city now has a yearly income of $58,000 from sewage charges, and could build "about five" disposal plants if present rates to householders were increased to $36 yearly, he said.

Birthday Party

Falls Church Opens Fete Tonight

The three-day Falls Church Festival, rounding out the city's birthday week celebration, will begin with a bang at 6:30 p. m. today when a mile-long parade starts at Broad and Spring sts.

Paraders, including military, civic and youth units, will march down Broad st. to Washington st., thence to Shreve st., south on Shreve st. to Hillwood ave., ending up at the festival site opposite Falls Church High School.

More than 50 commercial and trade exhibits will be scattered over the 3-acre festival grounds, according to Chairmen Henry Krages and Harry Doyle. Admission to the grounds will be 25 cents, with children under 12 free.

Official opening ceremonies will begin at 8 p. m., with Milo F. Christiansen, superintendent of the District Recreation Department, as guest speaker introduced by Mayor Albert F. Orme.

Other highlights of today's Festival program include: 7 p. m., a Navy School of Music Band concert; 8:30 p. m., exhibition platoon drill by units from Fort McNair; 9 p. m., first of three semi-finals in red head contest; 9:15 p. m., greased pig contest; 9:30 p. m. to 11, free public dancing to Boys Club of Washington Orchestra; 10 p. m., white elephant auction.

Festival hours Friday will be 5 to 11 p. m., with such special features as: 8:30 p. m., tug-of-war between Falls Church and Arlington Chamber of Commerce; 9 p. m. one-act play, "The Dyspeptic Ogre," by Falls Church Community Theater.

Saturday the festival grounds will be open from 10 a. m. to 11 p. m. Among the days highlights will be: 10 a. m., pet show; noon, pony show; 8 p. m. finals in red head contest; 8:30 p. m., fashion show.

All proceeds of the affair, sponsored by Falls Church Community Park, Inc., will go toward recreation park.

Marshall Heads Alexandria Chest

Robert S. Marshall, temporary city manager of Alexandria and executive director of the Alexandria Housing Authority, has been appointed chairman of the Community Chest campaign in Alexandria for this year.

Maurice Rosenberg, president of the Chest, announced the appointment yesterday at a meeting of the board of directors of the organization and other civic leaders called by R. H. Bogle, president of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce. The meeting was held at the George Mason Hotel.

Joy Charges School Site Delay to Ball

Arlintgon School Board Chairman Barnard Joy yesterday made public a letter acknowledging receipt of the resignation of School Board Attorney Frank L. Ball, jr.

In the letter, Joy criticized Ball's handling of negotiations for two school sites.

The letter said: "You were authorized by the board on December 17, eight months ago, to acquire the Sickle property at Ode and S 24th sts. as a site for the much needed Hume School.

"For some reason this work has been held up in your office. You realize, of course, that dropping this particular project at this time will further delay construction of the new Hume building."

Joy added in his letter that the board had authorized Ball on January 23 to proceed with acquisition of sites for expansion of the Hoffman-Boston School on South 14th st.

Joy said "action is still held up" on two of the lots in question, and "we are waiting to hear . . . what steps you have taken to obtain title to the strip of land to be bought from the Army-Navy Coutry Club . . . for the Honman-Boston School."

He termed it "regrettable" that Ball "decided to publish" his letter of resignation "before any of the members of the school board except myself had seen it."

In an August 10 letter to the board, Ball said he was quitting because of the board's failure to pay a coaching fee as agreed, and because he couldn't get accurate information about the Washington-Lee High School athletic fund.

Ball also complained that former school board consultant E. J. Braun was interfering with his duties and that the board had rejected his proposal for a new form for school board contracts with architects.

Last night, Ball told The Washington Post: "There has been no delay on anything I have handled for the board."

Prince Georges Sets Up Fast Medical Aid

Emergency medical service has been set up to give Prince Georges County residents "total coverage" day and night.

Dr. Julius Kauffman, an official of the county medical society, reported yesterday that 15 physicians have volunteered their services in emergencies.

In the event of sudden need, county residents have only to call the District Medical Bureau (RE. 6100) for the services. The Bureau then will notify the physician closest to the patient. The emergency program, Dr. Kauffman stressed, should not be used when the patient's regular physician is available.

He said the following also will use the program:

Fire control board, chief of county rescue squad, State and county police, welfare and health departments, Prince Georges County General Hospital, Leland Memorial Hospital, and the Hyattsville office of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

Visitors Describe Life of 600 In Paraguay Communal Group

Into hectic Washington yesterday came two men from the quiet, green hills of Primavera in Paraguay—on a mission.

Soft-spoken, red-bearded Stanley Fletcher and Hermann Arnold arrived to seek money for the hospital operated by their Society of Brothers. They brought to the Nation's Capital the breath of a different life indeed. Here it is as they described it:

Members of the 29-year-old society hold all property in common, living "what we believe to be the Christian life of brotherhood." The main industry is farming, but there are also beekeeping, bookbinding, cobbler and saddler work, surveying.

"Not Ascetics," He Says

Smoking and drinking are not forbidden. "We are not ascetics," said Arnold. "We don't consider such things important one way or the other." Beards are not a requirement, though most male members of the community wear them.

The family is the basic unity of the community. To get married, two single members must have the community's permission. The average family has four to six children. Breakfast is a family affair, lunch and dinner are eaten in the communal dining room. Daily schedule is to arise at 5 a. m., work till noon, siesta until 3, work until 6.

"The society's fundamental tenets and radically new pattern of living," it was explained, "are based upon the example of the early Christians." Religious meetings, with reading of the Bible and singing, are held a couple times during the week and on Sunday.

"We consider social work one of our most important tasks and we have a high proportion of trained technicians, including doctors, biologists, chemists, engineers and educators in the midst of a poor, undeveloped and medically distressed area in the heart of South America."

The 600 members include 17 nationalities, among them eight Americans.

Three were students from Harvard, including a science major who decided man's fervent accumulation of scientific knowledge was leading nowhere, said Fletcher. A recent arrival was a Tennessee teacher in her 20's who had come temporarily as a guest.

Working Guests Only

"You can come as a guest," said Arnold, "though not as a paying guest. You must work. We don't like people who walk around and look at us."

To join the society—and anyone can—you must go on a year's probation, during which time you give your worldly goods on loan to the group. After that, if you stay, your property goes definitely to the society.

Founded in 1920 in Germany, the society's property was confiscated by the Gestapo in 1937, said Fletcher, whereupon it went to England, from there in 1941 to Paraguay—"the only country we could find where such an international group could get ready entrance."

Most new members are between 20 and 30, said Fletcher. One was 92. Oldest now is 78. Men and women are about equal numerically.

Members of the society have come from all groups, said Fletcher —"farmers, laborers, coal miners, teachers, lawyers, doctors." Fletcher himself, a 44-year-old Briton, was a commercial artist when he joined 13 years ago. Arnold, 33, and originally a German, went directly out of school 14 years ago.

According to Fletcher, their 12-bed hospital is the only one in an area of about a thousand square miles, estimated population 20,000, in a region a hundred miles north of Asuncion. They need to double the hospital size, he said, and to buy an x-ray machine—they have none—along with other medical equipment. Their doctors, he said, serve the countryside, making their rounds on horseback.

They are not on the lookout actively for members, but when asked about this Fletcher said: "We could do with nurses for our hospital and a dentist—we have no dentist, though one of our own is being trained."

Fletcher and Arnold will be here about two weeks, they said, at 2410 Wyoming ave. nw.

Charles Kolb Funeral Rites Set Friday

Mr. Kolb

Funeral services for Charles A. Kolb, geographer and physical scientist who spent his adult lifetime in Government service, will be Friday at 11 a. m. at the Gawler Chapel, 1756 Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Mr. Kolb, who was 88, died Tuesday at Doctors Hospital after a short illness. He lived at 1808 Lamont st. nw.

Born at Leesburg, Va., he came to Washington as a young man. He entered service of the Navy Hydrographic office and transferred to the Forest Service of the Departmnt of Agriculture in 1905. He retired in 1928.

Mr. Kolb invented a steel engraving process for maps which was awarded a commendation at the Chicago World's Fair in 1892, and which, relatives said, is still in use. He was author of a number of publication on forestry and conservation which appeared in scientific magazines on these subjects.

A passionately modest person, he was recalled yesterday as one of the first to aid an assbciate in trouble but a stickler for Government regulations in his branch of the service. Since his retirement, he became known well to children in the neighborhood of his residence by his attentions to them on daily walks.

Mr. Kolb is survived by a number of nieces and nephews. Included are Oliver Gasch, assistant corporation counsel of the District; Manning Gasch, a real estate man here; Mrs. Ben Bowell of Washington, wife of a Navy captain; Arthur E. Gasch engineer of the Virginia Electric Power Co., Fairfax, Va.; Mrs. Anna Utz and Mrs. Catherine Simpson, of Fairfax County, Va.

Burial will be at Gleenwood Cemetery.

Pool, Theater Licensing Raises Issue

The question of whether the District government has a right to require licenses from functions authorized by the Interior Department was raised yesterday.

License Superintendent Chatham T. Nottingham opened up the problem by inquiring why public swimming pools operated by Government Services, Inc., and the Washington Theater Festival, operators of an outdoor summer theater in Meridian Hill Park, do not have licenses.

The pool issue was raised three weeks ago and Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark F. King said yesterday he advised Nottingham to request a formal ruling on the issue from Corportion Counsel Vernon E. West before making any attempt to prosecute the pool operators.

Nottingham was under the impression King would request the ruling, so he did not ask the corporation counsel for the opinion. Nottingham said yesterday. West said no opinion has been requested or is in preparation.

Meanwhile, Nottingham inquired into the theater operation and Assistant Corporation Counsel Robert Chalfonte under the impression an opinion was being prepared on the same subject, advised police not to prosecute.

And so the matter stood last night with both theater and pools continuing in operation. Nottingham was undecided what he would do next, but said he planned to confer with the city legal advisers.

The Interior Department has voiced strong opposition to the licensing requirement for functions it authorizes.

10.34% Rent Rise Recommended for 202 3-Room Units

A rent increase of 10.34 per cent was recommended yesterday by District Rent Examiner James G. Tyson on 202 three-room units operated by Wire Properties, Inc.

The apartments are located on the 2200 block of Ontario rd. nw., 1100 block of 6th st. ne., 1700 and 1800 blocks of H st. ne., 700 and 800 blocks of 18th st. ne., 200 block of Warren st. ne. and 1824 Benning rd. ne.

Proposed rents will range from $40 to $45.50. Present rents are from $36.35 to $41.35. Ralph Cusick was the attorney for the owner and Leonard S. Hayes represented a group of the tenants.

District Native

J. E. Potter, AAA Official, Dies at Party

Mr. Potter

John E. Potter, 46, manager of the international travel department of the American Automobile Association, died Tuesday night at a silver wedding anniversary party for a couple at whose wedding he was best man 25 years ago.

The couple was his brother-in-law and sister-in-law, Mr., and Mrs. W. H. Butler, and the party was in progress at their home at 39 Hamilton st. nw., when Mr. Potter was stricken.

A transportation career man, Mr. Potter was a District native and was educated at the Trinity School and Western High. He had been manager of the AAA's international travel department for the past year.

Earlier in his life, Mr. Potter established a wide reputation as a travel expert through service with the Carroll Travel Service, United States Lines and Union Station.

During World War II, he was manager of the passenger section of the U. S. Maritime Commission and deputy chief of the War Department's Overseas Transportation Division.

Mr. Potter belonged to the Washington Passenger Association, the Bon Vivants Travel Club, the Propeller Club of the U. S. and Washington Council 224, Knights of Columbus. He lived at 2007 Wisconsin ave. nw.

He leaves his widow, Mrs. Virgie Mary Potter and three sons, John E. Potter, jr., Joseph Matthew Potter and Michael Eugene Potter.

Mass will be said at 10 a. m. Saturday at the Holy Trinity Church, 3514 O st. nw. Burial will be in Holy Rood Cemetery.

George L. Vaughn

St. Louis, Aug. 17 (AP).—George L. Vaughn, St. Louis Negro attorney who led a court fight against real estate agreements segregating members of his race, died today of heart disease. He was 69.

The United States Supreme Court ruled last year an agreement between property owners, forbidding them to sell their property to Negroes, was not enforceable in court. Vaughn led the series of appeals in the case to the Supreme Court.

Vaughn, as an alternate delegate to the Democratic National Convention at Philadelphia last year, also led a fight to unseat the Mississippi delegation in a civil rights dispute on the convention floor. His motion was defeated.

Margaret Mitchell

Atlanta, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—Margaret Mitchell goes to her final resting place Thursday in the city's oldest cemetery where lie the bodies of Confederate unknown dead.

The author of "Gone with the Wind" died Tuesday of injuries received last Thursday when she was struck by a speeding automobile.

Private funeral services will be held at 11 a. m., EDT. A few hundred close friends and relatives will be admitted to the services.

Mrs. Johnson, Widow of General, Dies

Mrs. Johnson

Mrs. Helen Kilbourne Johnson, 70, widow of the former National Recovery Administrator, Brig. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, died yesterday at Doctors Hospital.

Mrs. Johnson had been in declining health since the death of her husband in April, 1942. For the past two months her condition was critical. Death came as a result of a heart attack.

The Johnsons met while he was at West Point. They were married in 1904. She is remembered here as one of the most gracious hostesses of the New Deal period, and was also active in philanthropic work.

Her son, Col. Kilbourne Johnston of Fairfax, Va. survives her. He was named after her father, Col. H. S. Kilbourne, and resumed the "t" in his name which General Johnson had dropped while a student at West Point.

Others surviving are a grandson, Hugh S. Johnston; one sister, Mrs. Ira C. Welborn of Washington; and two brothers, Guion Kilbourne of Washington and Col. H. S. Kilbourne of Denver, Colo.

Funeral services will be held Friday at 3 p. m. at the Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will follow in Arlington Cemetery.

Elder John MacNeil

Funeral services for Elder John W. MacNeil, 63, former Seventh-Day Adventist Church leader who died Tuesday at the Washington Sanitarium will be held at 2 p. m. Friday at the Sligo Adventist Church, Carroll and Flower aves., Takoma Park.

Mr. MacNeil

Interment will be in Washington Memorial Park.

Elder MacNeil was pastor of the Capitol Memorial Seventh-Day Adventist Church at Fifth and F sts. nw. for seven years. He left in 1933 to become president of the Potomac Conference, embracing the District, Virginia and Maryland.

C. C. Fulton Leser

Baltimore, Aug. 17 (AP).—C. C. Fulton Leser, artist who once discovered a $100,000 painting by Tintoretto beneath layers of old varnish, died of a heart attack at his home yesterday. He was 49.

Leser was noted as one of this country's most skillful restorers of old oil paintings. He had restored valuable works of art in such famous collections as those of J. Pierpont Morgan, Henry C. Frick, the Yale Art Gallery and the Walker Gallery in Minneapolis.

It was at the Walker Gallery he set to work on a canvas valued at about $100 and found a Madonna and child painted about 1565 by Tintoretto.

Leser was a graduate of Johns Hopkins University and studied art at the Maryland Institute, the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, the American School of Art at Fontainebleu, France, and the Fogg Museum at Harvard University.

Arthur R. Smith

Friends in Washington learned yesterday of the death, July 14 at Washington, Pa. of Arthur Richardson Smith, a long-time resident of the District. Mr. Smith was a native of Norfolk, Va.

Surviving him are his widow, Mrs. Virginia F. Smith; a sister, Mrs. Charles F. Spottswood of Norfolk, and a brother, H. Garrett Smith, Virginia Beach, Va. Funeral services took place privately at the grave in Cerad Grove Cemetery, Norfolk.

William M. Maloy

Baltimore, Aug. 17 (AP).—William Milnes Maloy, 76, former chairman of the Public Service Commission and for many years a leading figure in State Democratic politics, died last night. He had been a patient at Johns Hopkins Hospital since Sunday.

A native of Blacksburg, Va., he moved here when a child. After graduating from the University of Maryland Law School, he took a master's degree and a doctor's degree in law at Catholic University.

William J. Richards

Pottsville, Pa., Aug. 17 (AP).—William J. Richards, 86, who rose from a rural school teacher to the presidency of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal & Iron Co., died today.

Richards introduced the first first aid and safety campaign in the anthracite fields, a program that was to spread throughout the entire industry.

Mortgagees Buy Corby Tract On Rockville Pike for $165,000

The 120-acre Corby tract on Rockville pike in Montgomery County, once proposed as the site of a 20-million-dollar hotel, yesterday was sold for $165,000 at public auction to a representative of the property's mortgage holders.

W. Hiles Pardoe, vice president of the National Savings & Trust Co., was the only bidder at the auction on the Rockville Courthouse steps.

Pardoe declined to give the names of the four mortgage holders he represented, but said they would try to sell the property and regain their investment as soon as Montgomery Circuit Court ratifies yesterday's sale.

The Corby Tract, at the intersection of Garrett Park rd., was acquired by the Diplomat Properties, Inc., of New York five years ago for a reported $200,000. After the corporation's hotel plan fell through, it failed to make the neecessary payments on the mortgage.

Police Promotion Setup Is Revamped

A new police review board to make final determination of fitness of department members for promotions was appointed yesterday by Inspector Floyd A. Truscott, acting superintendent of police.

Members will be Inspector Milton D. Smith, chairman, and Inspector Robert S. Bryant, Walter T. Storm, Clarence H. Lutz and William J. Cunningham.

The board will be aided in its work, Inspector Truscott said, by a new written survey form to be used for the first time.

The review board will function in connection with forthcoming civil service examinations for promotion in the department. The examination results will weigh 40 per cent in final determination, and findings of the review board, on recommendations of commanding officers, will rate 60 per cent.

Findings of the commanding officers and review board cover experience and general efficiency of the applicants for promotion.

In past examinations, held every two years, the review board relied on verbal or general written recommendations of commanding officers rating the men in their commands who applied for promotions.

The new form will detail their suitability and the review board will use the form to "equalize ratings between precincts, bureaus and divisions," and will "eliminate any possible tendency on the part of any commanding officer to overrate or underrate members of his command," it was announced.

Court Order

Babies Stay Under Care Of Bachelor

A 45-year-old bachelor uncle yesterday was authorized to continue caring for two small children until their parents reestablished a home.

The bachelor-custodian is James Hubert Hardison, of 2007 Upshur st. ne. He is the paternal uncle of the children, Lawrence Hardison, 3, and his sister, Frieda, 1.

Judge Richmond B. Keech of District Court two weeks ago directed Hardison to take over care of the children whose parents, Ollice C. Hardison, 31, and his wife, Eileen, 23, were estranged.

Yesterday, Attorney Francis J. Buckley, jr., told the court the couple were reconciled and now are looking for a home. Judge Keech decided to leave the children with their uncle until the parents find a home.

Buckley said the uncle had placed the the youngsters in a home in nearby Maryland and that they were being treated well. However, the little girl has suffered virus pneumonia, the lawyer said.

Mrs. Hardison, when asked how it was she and her husband were reconciled, said to a reporter:

"We did it for the children."

Two Virginia Draft Offices Are Combined

As part of a State-wide economy program, the offices of the Arlington and Alexandria Selective Service Boards have been combined.

The Arlington board remains a separate organization, with Frank H. Eastman, 6733 Lee hwy., as chairman, but its office will be that of the Alexandria board, Room 309 Postoffice Building. The Arlington board formerly was at 3150 Wilson blvd.

Edward J. Weipers, 418 Duke st., is chairman of the Alexandria board. Under the new arrangement, Miss Virginia Jefferson, clerk of this board, also will serve as clerk for the Arlington board.

Under the new plan 121 of the State's 129 selective service boards will operate only part time, Col. Asher W. Harman, state director of selective service, said at Richmond, according to the Associated Press. Most of them will be open only 20 to 28 hours a week, he said.

Office hours of the Arlington-Alexandria office, however, will be from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. Monday through Friday.

Complaints Heard On Reduction of J-2 Bus Service

The District Public Utilities Commission yesterday heard complaints by residents of the Manor Park area against reduction of service on the Capital Transit Co. J-2 Kennedy st. bus line.

The J-2 buses now run at 20-minute intervals instead of the previous schedule of 12-minute runs during nonrush hours. The CTC contended the J-2 and M-2 lines will use the same route between 14th st. and Colorado ave. nw. and 3d and Kennedy sts. nw., thus providing buses every 10 minutes over that part of the route.

The commission took the matter under advisement.

Finance, Control Officials Resign U. S. Berlin Jobs

Berlin, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—Joe Fisher Freeman, director of the military government's finance division, said today he will resign this week because a reorganization ordered by John J. McCloy minimized the division's role.

James L. Sundquist, military government control officer, also announced his resignation. From Arlington, Va., he helped plan the switch of control from the Army to the State Department.

Freeman denied he is resigning because of his marriage to a German.

Senate Votes Today On Clark Nomination

By the United Press

The Senate agreed last night to vote at 3:30 p. m. today on the appointment of Attorney General Tom Clark to the United States Supreme Court.

Acting Democratic Leader Francis J. Myers of Pennsylvania won unanimous consent for today's vote and promptly cancelled a night session to debate the nomination.

After voting on Clark, the Senate will consider the nomination of Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) to be Attorney General.

'I Was Expecting It,' Said the Father . . .

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MOTHER OF FOUR IN 11 MONTHS—Mrs. Raymond Hix, 30, of Jasper, Tenn., looks at her rapidly growing family. She holds Robert and Roberta, twins born Sunday, her second set in 11 months and 6 days. Eva and Charles, the first set, show mixed reactions, and 2-year-old brother, James, looks at the new arrivals.

Their father, 28, said he was expecting it

Veteran Jailed For Posing as Blind Beggar

New York, Aug. 17 (AP).—When tall, 20-year-old Beecher Beth MacLeod, jr., got out of the Navy, he couldn't find a job.

So he taped up his eyes, put on dark glasses, and with a tin cup and cane toured busy Brooklyn streets as a "blind man." For three months, he took in about $15 a day, which easily supported himself and his wife.

That was the story he told in magistrate's court yesterday after he was arrested by a detective. The detective had seen him drive up and park a car, before starting his daily beggar's rounds.

Magistrate Charles E. Ramsgate said people are not sympathetic to "fakers like you" and sentenced him to six months in the workhouse.

Have Russian scientists discovered a short cut to iced tea?

The USSR Information Bulletin, published here, reports that tea bushes have been transplanted to Siberia, and are doing just fine.

Tip Reveals Suspect Is Back in Town

The suspect is Garnett L. Caudell, 45, of 107 E st. nw. He was charged with false pretense in connection with a $22.40 check transaction at a local Safeway store.

Police said Caudell is wanted also in Marlboro, Rockville and Silver Spring, Md., on similar charges.

Caudell, a truck driver, had been wanted here since last May. Six days ago authorities at Carthage, Mo., notified local police they had picked him up on a check charge.

Metropolitan police couldn't extradite Caudell because the amount involved was less than $50, making the alleged offense only a misdemeanor. However, Washington police tipped off Silver Spring police on Caudell's whereabouts.

Police here were waiting for him.

Red Intellectuals Get Small Comfort

Budapest, Aug. 17 (AP).—Worried Hungarian intellectuals today were assured they have nothing to fear under the Communists if they accept working class leadership like that given brain workers in Russia.

Deputy Premier Matyas Rakosi quoted Soviet Prime Minister Stalin as saying intellectuals have equal rights, so long as they accept workers' leadership and do not try to set up as a class by themselves.

Video in Color Beamed Here For Tests

Color television was beamed into Washington yesterday, but few persons knew it and even fewer saw it.

The colorcasts were received on special sets at the National Guard Armory. They were the first trial runs for scheduled broadcasts for the December meeting here of the American Medical Association.

Yesterday's program originated at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, through radio station WMAR-TV. The Baltimore hospital plans to telecast surgical operations and medical procedures in color for viewing here by the physicians.

Similar television was done from Atlantic City, N. J., Hospital at the June assembly of the AMA there.

The programs are sponsored by Smith, Kline and French, Philadelphia pharmaceutical firm, with equipment developed by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Sicilian Hills Are Combed For Leader of Kidnap Gang

Palermo, Sicily, Aug. 17 (U.P.).—Police and soldiers pressed their search through the Sicilian hills today for Salvatore Giuliano, the "Robin Hood" bandit whose gang has kidnaped six wealthy landowners thus far in a summer "fund raising campaign."

Giuliano, postwar Italy's most notorious outlaw, has asked ransoms ranging from 50 million lire ($86,950) to 100 million lire ($173,900) for the captive landowners.

The abductions all occurred between August 2 and August 12 in the Montelepre Region near Palermo. In each case, the victim was forced at gun-point to leave his car or his estate and accompany the outlaws. Later, his relatives received a ransom note.

Among those abducted were Duke Francesco di Bratameng, prince of Valino and Baron Gabriele Dara, 62.

The other victims included a former national deputy and a former mayor of Corleone.

Of those abducted, only Giuseppe Miccice has been released on payment of 50 million lire ransom.

Police believed the other five victims were being held in the honeycomb of caves in the Montelepre area, where Giuliano makes his headquarters.

The Collegiate Miss Today Demands Smart Clothes That Match Her Mind

By Peggy Preston

SHE'S a smart young trick—that darling daughter of yours who will be whisking off to college in a few weeks. And, unlike yourself at her age (or were you not the same, really?), she knows a great deal about a variety of matters, not the least of these being fashion, and what she expects of it.

So opinionated, indeed, is this little lassie, that few designers care to cross her path without first evaluating her wishes or demands. Each season she is the subject of innumerable surveys and polls as clothing creators seek to discover exactly what she will choose to wear, come campus time.

One of the most reliable of these surveys is conducted annually by Fairchild Publications, Inc. Taking a cross-country test vote, the survey naturally turns up a widely divergent set of tastes as the gals in Maine, California, Georgia and Kansas are heard from. But, when the scores are boiled down, the survey reveals what the college girl, in general, will demand. This year, for instance, she has listed 10 types of clothing which she considers essential to her wardrobe.

What's more my dear matrons and near-matrons, she's going to find just these types when she goes shopping for her college outfits. And that, as any of us old grads will have to admit, is more than we have been able to accomplish.

HERE THEY ARE, then, these subjects of her desires:

1. Slim to moderately full skirts—the latter a little more popular. U.C.L.A. girls explained this preference by saying they took slim skirts because there were not many other good alternatives to overly-full silhouettes. They are looking for the "moderate" kind for this winter.

2. Midcalf-length skirts, or "skirts not too short!" No students expressed a desire to return to the knee-length vogue of the L-85 days.

3. "Cashmere at lower prices, please!"—that's the plea from campuses across the country. Most girls start out by saying they'd rather have cashmeres. But they will take near-imitations—almost any fine-gauge sweater in a soft yarn, and priced—"Under $10, for sure." Short, waist-length cardigans are gaining in popularity, and short-sleeve slipons are favorites in combination with suits and skirts.

4. Jackets from $15 to $20—The coeds would like a few blazers, too. University of Colorado students include western leather jackets on their "wanted" lists.

5. Classic coats—Camel's hair, belted back coats rate No. 1 from coast to coast. They like storm coats for real winter wear, and inner-linings are a major item. Tailored gabardine or short-flared corduroy toppers are favored for early fall and spring. There is evidence of growing favor for rain-shine coats across the country. University of Michigan students specify that they want fabrics that don't look like they were meant to go out in the rain, "Give us tweed or corduroy—treated to resist rain," they ask.

6. Gabardine suits for all-around wear—traveling, classes, informal dates, trips to town. Next in favor is the basic dress in soft wool.

7. Knit dresses—growing college girl pets. They say they are perfect to wear everywhere—football games, rush teas, dates.

8. More color in date dresses—College girls agree they don't want these frocks to look too "juniory. But they dont want them to look as though they belong on sirens, either. Best bet, they say, are dresses made from elaborate fabrics, but cut on simple lines.

9. Inexpensive dresses of rayon crepe, and similar fabrics, suitable for Sunday dinners at fraternity houses, sorority suppers, etc.

10. Dance dresses priced under $50. The college girls polled in this survey express a leaning toward the floor-length formal, rather than the ankle-length. They also prefer the strapless bodice. "Give us nice, crisp fabrics," they insist. "Taffeta, or something on that order."

PLAIDS in big, bold patterns are lending dash to college ensembles this year. Here the vogue takes the form of a classic suit, with black, navy and bottle green the dominating colors. Skirt has inverted pleats both back and front and additional pleating on either side, may be worn separately with erkins or sweaters. Jacket, with five buttons, may be closed snugly at the neck. In misses' sizes, it is available at Franklin Simon's

BOUND to capture attention on the campus is this jaunty little topper, made of beige colored wool and lined with honey-toned muskrat which doubles over to form the rolled collar. Tuxedo front, slit pockets and 3/4 length are good details for fall—1949. Another interesting variation of this garment is in navy blue, lined with silver muskrat. Available in misses sizes at Franklin Simon's

BY DECREE from the college lassies themselves, knee-length shorts are tops for campus sportswear this season. Here a pair in rich, colorful wool plaid are worn with brown leather belt, velveteen jacket and wool knit turtle neck sweater. Jacket colors are black, green or brown. In sizes 12 to 20 at Best & Co.

POCKETS are the big news in college girl fashions. They abound on almost every costume—and the bigger the better. This slim basic, of soft beige wool, sports pouch pocket backed with burnt orange suede, a fabric that is repeated on the buttons. Available in sizes 9 to 15, in the College Shop at Lansburgh's

Tennis Touch Makes Sportswear Like a Racket

Paris, Aug. 17 (AP).—If you get hard up for buttons next winter just dig out the screws on your tennis racket press and put them to work. For, according to Hermes, swank sportswear house, they are the last word in chic. They button up the fronts of dresses, decorate jacket pockets and also adorn calf leather belts.

Another novelty introduced by Hermes is a double-sleeved sweater. One in maroon wool had sleeveless coat of pepper and salt. This formula was also seen on a box coat of honey colored fleecy wool that had oversleeves of dark tan suede. A unique effect is obtained when the oversleeves are rolled up to the elbow.

Hermes also features massive full-swinging topcoats and box jackets of foot-square vivid plaid with huge low-placed pockets. A sleveless coat of pepper and salt tweed set over a matching suit with a curly lamb collar was shown.

Plain tailormades arecoupled with satin shirts. One in green herringbone had a much pleated trouser skirt with a flying panel dangling down back.

Raphael, Spanish suit specialist, shows much fancier brands. He emphasizes hips with puffed out peplums and jutting pockets. Many of them are collarless with weskits or fronts of leopard skin or pique.

He used a lot of velvet and braid embroidery. On a mohagany colored fine wool suit he uses threads of wool for the knitted midrift portion.

A quilted velvet suit looked like a coat until the flared skirt was ripped off and slung around the shoulders as a cape.

Africa Inspires Adrian Fashions

By The Associated Press

Beverly Hills, Calif., Aug. 17.—The wilds of Africa have invaded fashions.

Inspired by his recent trip to the Dark Continent, Adrian has designed a series of fashions that look like everything from costumes of native chieftains to cold, sleek cobras.

One outfit, a sleek hooded suit of cobra-like material, with long tapering gloves, is startlingly reminiscent of a reptile.

Another costume, dressed up with braid and tassels, looks like a fuzzy-wuzzy native. Long fringe and braids make another look like an Indian princess' garb.

Fashions for 'After Dark' Stress Rich Fabrics

ELEGANT "after-dark" fashions, this fall are rich in fabric, gracious in design, reports the September issue of Charm, the magazine for the business girl. One of this season's stars-of-the-night is stiff, stand-alone taffeta . . . styled in a ball gown which has a deeply crushed bodice, and a great, low bow of bustle.

'Twas a Fine Housewarming Irishmen Had

IRISH EYES were smiling yesterday at a housewarming party given by three Irish bachelors. Hugh McCann, Counselor at the Irish Legation, and Eamonn L. Kennedy and Sean Hayden, first and third secretaries, were hosts at the party which was held from 6 to 8 o'clock at 2831 Chesterfield pl. nw.

Complete with cook who never repeats himself, the new house is tastefully furnished and has a garden with flowers growing in it. The Irish Minister, Sean Nunan, attended yesterday's gala fete, as well as the First Secretary and Mrs. Joseph D. Brennan.

Others in the gathering included Sir Sidney and Lady Caine, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas B. Larkin, pretty Miss Virginia Larkin, the Belgian Attache and Mme. Patternotte de la Vaillee, Mrs. Livingston Satterthwaite, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander M. Rosenson, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Briggs, Dr. and Mrs. William F. O'Donnell, Miss Polly Norment, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Lawrence and Mr. and Mrs. James McCullough.

Also, Mr. and Mrs. Philip S. Brown, Arthur Smithies, Mr. and Mrs. Glen H. Craig, Mr. and Mrs. D. K. Hopkinson, Miss Evelyn Ripps, Thoralf Svendsen, Norwegion Commercial Counselor, Leo Leighton, Joseph Sweeney, Garner Ranney, the Commercial Secretary of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. W. A. Horrocks, and many others.

Farewell Luncheon Honors Berckemeyer

THE Ambassador of Peru, Fernando Berckemeyer, was honored yesterday at a farewell luncheon given at La Salle Du Bois by members of his embassy staff. Senora de Berckemeyer is vacationing in California, her home State, and the Ambassador is leaving this week for a short visit in Peru.

Among those attending yesterday's luncheon were Minister German Aramburu, Air Attache Gen. C. A. P. Miguel A. Llona, Minister German Fernandez Concha, Military Attache Col. Manuel E. Cossio, Naval Attache Comdr. Juan Manuel Castro, Second Secretary Alvaro Rey de Castro, Second Secretary Jose Hernandez Aguerro, Second Secretary Carlos Gibson, and the Assistant Commercial Attache Jose Alfred Adrianzen.

U. N. Club Luncheon Fetes Olney Star Dean Harens

DEAN HARENS, who is starring at Olney this week in the play "Charm," was honor guest yesterday at a luncheon given at the United Nations Club. Guests at the speakers table were Mrs. Parker Dove, chairman of the luncheon, John Breunner, executive director of the Washington Opera and Theater Co., Paul Matthews, Mrs. Ruth Crane, Mrs. Ethel Manning, Paul Hume, Miss Evelyn Freyman and Miss Patricia Simmons.

Special guests at the luncheon were the 20 students who are here with the International Institute of Education on a six-week scholarship.

Clarence Westbrooks Honor Mrs. McDevitt

MR. AND MRS. CLARENCE WESTBROOK entertained at a swimming party, cocktails and buffet supper last evening at Westbrook Terrace, their home in Hillandale, Md., in honor of Mrs. Betty McDevitt, to celebrate her recent election as honorary Mayor of Silver Spring, Md. About 40 guests attended.

MRS. GEORGE JOHN FRANZEN was the former Miss Lee Jeannette Lofaro before her marriage August 7 at St. Matthew's Cathedral. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Santo Lofaro of Washington and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Franzen of Pasadena, Calif. Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a gown of ice blue satin and carried a bouquet of white sweet peas and narcissus. Following the reception at the home of the bride's parents, the couple left for a New York wedding trip. They will reside at White Plains, N. Y.

Stuckey

MRS. JAMES HERBERT SCHERFF was married in St. Thomas More Catholic Church August 13, the Rev. Father Joseph Wingler officiating. The bride, the former Miss Mary Jacqueline Thomas is the daughter of Francis Everett Thomas of Arlington and her husband is the son of Grover Cleveland Scherff of Stockholm, Nebr. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white chiffon and carried a bouquet of white roses and orchids. Following the reception the couple left for a wedding trip to the New England States

Harris and Ewing

MRS. JOSEPH M. HARDEE, the former Miss Thelma Verleen Tatre, was married in Washington August 14, the Rev. C. E. Westphal officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph W. Tatre of Buffalo, N. Y. and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Hardee of Myrtle Beach, S. C. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white satin and carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums. The couple will reside in Takoma Park, Md.

MRS. ORCHARD BENINGTON, the former Miss Denise Dybing, was married August 10 at the First English Lutheran Church, Baltimore, Md. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Dybing of Presho, S. Dak., and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Benington of Alexandria, Va. Following their honeymoon in Wisconsin, the newlyweds will reside in Chicago, Ill. Mr. Benington was graduated with the Class of '49 from George Washington University where he was a member of Kappa Alpha fraternity. His bride also attended GWU and was a member of Chi Omega sorority.

Miss Price Plans Visit

Kees, Crawfords Cancel Congress Party Plans

Representative and Mrs. John Kee and Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Crawford have canceled the party planned for members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee on Thursday, August 25. Because of the unavoidable absence from the city on August 25 of some members of the committee, it is necessary to postpone the party to a day in early January.

O. H. Cotes to Live in Penna.

Commander and Mrs. Oliver Henri Cote will reside in Drexel Hill, Penna., following a wedding trip to northern Wisconsin. They were married August 6 in Wausau, Wis. The bride, the former Miss June Marie Beasa, is the daughter of Mrs. Paul Carl Beasa and her husband is the son of Mrs. Anna B. Cote of Washington.

Mrs. Aaron Ascher Here

Mrs. Aaron Ascher of Chicago, with her two young sons, is here for a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Neuman.

CORRECTION

Miss Freddy M. St. Clair and James F. Galligan were married August 12 in the chambers of Municipal Court Justice Aubrey Fennell. In the account of the wedding which appeared in The Washington Post yesterday, Miss St. Clair was incorrectly listed as Miss Ehlbert. Miss St. Clair is the daughter of Mrs. Henry L. Ehlbert, and the marriage announcement was made by Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Ehlbert.

The story also erroneously described Mr. Galligan as associated with the Evansville, Ind., Press. The Washington Post regrets the errors.

On the Shoreham Terrace

The Minister of Jordan, Dr. Yusuf Haikal, and Mme. Haikal entertained for 18 guests at a dinner party last evening on the terrace of the Shoreham Hotel.

Also entertaining at the dinner hour on the terrace last evening were Admiral and Mrs. Brian Schofield and Maj. Gen. and Mrs. A. B. Quinton.

Mrs. Bradley to Fete 30 Coeds

Mrs. Omar Bradley, a Kappa Alpha Theta sorority alumna, will be hostess on August 27 at a tea for some 30 young women preparing to enter college this fall. The tea will be from 3 to 5 o'clock on the base at Fort Myer, Va.

Each year a tea is given to acquaint young college women with the Kappa Alpha Theth organization before they meet it in their respective colleges. Those attending the tea on August 27 will be entering such schools as Duke, Indiana, William and Mary, Randolph Macon, Cornell, Michigan, Iowa State, Kansas University, Ohio Wesleyan and Washington College.

Receiving with Mrs. Bradley will be Mrs. Donald Hogate and the president of the William and Mary chapter of Kappa Alpha Theta, Miss Betty Jane Walsh. Mrs. Roge. Johnson and Mrs. Glen M. Vickery will pour.

About Directions for Making Silk Stocking Rug

I would appreciate it if you would publish directions for making a silk stocking rug.
A Reader.

Dye the stockings first by using a good commercial dye. For use in rugs it is well to boil the dye into the stockings so that the color will be more permanent. If you wish to use brilliant colors you should remove the stocking color before dyeing by the use of a commercial color remover sold where dyes are sold. When the stockings and the dyes are thoroughly dry, cut them into strips, starting at the top and cutting in a spiral downward so that each stocking makes just one strip. Cut the strip narrower at the top and bottom of the stocking where it is heavier. It will take approximately one-half pound of stockings for each square foot of rug.

If you are making a hooked rug these strips can be used as they are. If you plan to make a crocheted rug, sew the strips together and wrap into a ball before you start to crochet.

Can you give me a recipe for "Cherry Bounce?" Years ago at a friends house she served what she called "Cherry Bounce" made from the cherry seeds from canning. She poured water over the seeds, added sugar and fermented. What I wish to know is the proportions used and how long required to ferment before usable. It is a delicious drink and rather potent?
F. R. S.

Can any of our readers help us with the recipe?

I have some lovely fragile porcelain figurines which are badly in need of cleaning. They were manufactured in Germany where they were purchased. Several of the figurines are decorated with a very dainty fragile lace which I believe was made by dipping real lace into the porcelain mixture. Then they were shaped into the desired folds and baked for the hardening process. By their very nature, these lace skirts, etc. are very natural dust and grime catchers. Could you advise me of some safe cleaning solution which would not be injurious to the lace or the colored enamels used on the figurines?
G. G. P.

Since the lace is covered with porcelain, it should clean nicely by using a detergent or liquid shampoo soap in water. Apply the soapy water to the figures with a very small fine brush such as a camel's hair paint brush. If the objects are large do not apply the solution over the entire surface, but wash and rinse only one small area at a time, working from the top down. Because of the extreme delicacy of the objects it will take time and patience to thoroughly clean them and it may be necessary to go over them several times, first with the soap or detergent and then rinsing. Apply rinse water with a brush also and shake any remaining water off of the figure rather than attempting to dry with a cloth. When you have them clean, I suggest covering them with a glass or plastic dome to prevent future dust accumulation.

I am considering repapering three rooms in my house. Can you give me some hints as to what materials I will need and how I can estimate the number of rolls of paper needed, etc. These rooms were previously papered three to four years ago. Should I remove the old paper and how? We had a so-called "washable" paper in our dinette but I had no luck in getting dirt or grease spots out. What kind of paper shall I look for that could be cleaned?

When wallpaper is firmly attached and in good condition, in only one layer, new paper can be hung over it, although with some risk of being loosened by the moisture of the new paste striking through and softening the old. This risk can be lessened by using no more paste than is necessary and doing the work on a day so dry and warm that drying will be rapid. Sizing should not be necessary. Should there be two or more thicknesses of paper on the wall, however, all should be removed to the bare plaster before painting or repapering.

Old wallpaper can be removed by soaking with warm water to soften and free the paste. For this, a sponge or a wide brush can be used, or water can be sprayed on with an insect spray. Work begins at one end of a wall, in vertical strips. When the wall is completed, the paper is given another soaking. When there are two or more thicknesses of paper, several applications of water will be needed, with time for it to soak through to the paste on the bottom layer. A handful of washing soda added to the gallon of water may quicken the action, but care should be taken not to let the solution settle on finished woodwork for it will destroy paint or varnish.

When paper loosens, tear it off from the top. Use a broad putty knife on sticking places. When paper is off and wall still damp, sponge with warm clear water. When dry, rub with fine sandpaper, wrapped around a block of wood, to smooth off bits of paper and hardened paste.

To estimate the amount of paper needed, first measure the distance around the walls of the room. Then measure the width of all doors and windows, as well as the fireplace, if any, and subtract half this total from the first measurement. Measure the height of the ceiling, too.

In estimating the amount of paper needed, remember that much wallpaper comes in rolls 20 feet long and 22 inches wide, or 21 inches after trimming. Some, however, comes in widths of 18 to 32 inches and sometimes in other widths and lengths. Some rolls are double, others single. Check yours for the exact dimensions, then figure how far it will go in covering the estimated wall space. If there is a question of matching designs, this, too, will have to be taken into account in making your calculations.

In assembling supplies for the job, be sure to provide yourself with a working surface large enough to lay out the entire strip of paper—or at least most of it. A table, cutting board, a piece of wallboard on a table or two wide boards on trestles will do. Other necessary equipment includes a pair of large scissors, a yardstick, a pencil, a wallpaper paste brush, a paperhanger's brush for smoothing out the paper after it is on the wall, a narrow roller for pressing the edges flat, and a plumb line which can be made by tying a weight from a piece of string. (This helps you determine whether you're hanging the wallpaper straight.)

Of course, a stepladder is essential and you should have a good supply of clean rags and a container for the paste. You can mix your own wallpaper paste, but it's scarcely worth the trouble for ready-mixed pastes are probably much better than those you would be able to make. Usually, these need only the addition of water.

For detailed suggestions on hanging the paper, I'd suggest you obtain some such book as the "Complete Home Encyclopedia," by Dorothy Pace (Claxton House), at a library or book store. This book includes helpful sketches and considerable information on the subject.

About the wallpaper for the dinette. There's a paper with a baked-on enamel finish that is quite practical for kitchens, bathrooms, dinettes, etc. It is completely washable. For more information about it, call Sterling 8585.

Regarding the reader who was having difficulty in removing chewing gum from a rug: I have just successfully gotten some out through the use of another ball of chewing gum and ice water. I rubbed the spot on the rug with the chewing gum ball and the gum caught there stuck to it. To keep the gum from getting too soft while I worked, I used the ice water. Gradually, I worked all the bits of gum out of my rug.

I have a very old Dutch oven which I seasoned the way you once described in your column. The pot now has an odor, it seems to chip and the surface is not too smooth. I scoured the pot with cleansing powder and steel wool, but have not reseasoned it yet because I wished to await your advice.
A. N.

If iron pots are not in constant use and are stored closed they will rust and develop an odor making reseasoning necessary. The pot should be scoured with steel wool until the surface is entirely free of loose particles and is as smooth as possible. When thoroughly scoured, wash, rinse and dry. Now, completely cover the interior with an unsalted fat and let heat in a very slow oven (250 degrees F.) for several hours. Use a pastry brush to spread the fat over the entire surface and as it heats, add more fat to take the place of that which is absorbed.

Being sure to have the pot completely dry before putting away will lengthen the time between reseasonings, as will frequent use. To dry the pot thoroughly after each washing, place over low heat or put into the oven for a few minutes.

Designing Lady Helps Make Homes

By Lucia Brown

Have you ever admired the gold-and-white package on your favorite ice cream? The pink-striped box that snugly encloses your next home permanent? The sleek lines of a shiny new coffee maker?

Chances are that you are appreciating the work of a former Washington girl, one of the few women in the field of industrial desgin. She is Mrs. Harper Richards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Beville of Chevy Chase and a graduate of Central High School here.

Mrs. Richards and her husband are co-partners in a Chicago firm that designs everything from household articles and food packaging to model kitchens, show rooms, and streamlined trash cans for Michigan ave. Right now, they are vacationing and visiting her parents here, along with their two youngsters, Holly, 4½, and Wynn, 15 months.

Inadvertent First Step

Tall, slender Louise Beville inadvertantly took her first step toward a career in industrial design when she went to New York to study at the Traphagen School before the war. Fashion was her field then and from Traphagen, she went to the Zeigler Academy in Paris. In the style capital she also designed clothes for Vogue and did fashion sketches for a Buenos Aires newspaper.

The outbreak of war brought her back to New York, a side-job as a photographer's model led to her present work in industrial design. Louise, a striking-looking, brown-eyed blonde, was asked by Wynn Richards, a famous woman photographer, to pose for a bridal picture.

The picture, in the Italian manner, was sold to Saturday Evening Post and appeared on its cover. Perhaps you remember it. It was certainly a never-to-be-forgotten event for Louise for, through Mrs. Richards she met her son, Harper, an industrial designer with one of the best known firms in this comparatively new field.

Expanding Partnership

The Richards were married 8 years ago, when he founded his own firm in Chicago, she went into the business with him. Today, they have a staff of 10 and offices in a smart, modern building they converted from an old-fashioned residence just off Michigan ave.

Besides her artistic ability and knowledge of design, Louise brings a woman's point-of-view to their jobs involving household articles, kitchens and the like. They have done model kitchens for advertising and food companies, say their ideas on the subject are not revolutionary.

"We just try to make our designs better than anybody elses," Harper says, laughingly. "If you get too far ahead of the crowd, you unfortunately leave the crowd behind."

Managing a house and two children, plus holding down a man-sized job from 9 to 5 daily, and engaging in many social and civic activities calls for a good deal of planning on the part of Louise Richards.

"We live only four minutes walk from the office, which helps a lot," she says. "I try to run the house as efficiently as an office, writing out menus once a week and dong all the shopping on Fridays. We have a maid and, usually, a nurse for the baby.

Specialty Is Shashlik

"We entertain a lot and I have a good supply of quickly-prepared menus on hand. Shashlik is a specialty of mine. I marinate cubed lamb overnight in a mixture of lemon juice, sliced onions, port wine, salt and pepper. Then, the next day, I put it on skewers with slices of green pepper and small whole tomatoes and broil it over the charcoal burner in our fireplace. Served with a baked potato, green salad, and dessert, you have a perfect meal."

Asked about her own kitchen, Mrs. Richards admits that it's anything but modern.

"Oh, the equipment is modern all right," she says, "but I like a big, old-fashioned kitchen. Ours even has paintings on the wall—my own, done in Paris. I suppose I must have been hungry all the time, then, for my paintings were all of food!"

By Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

LOUISE BEVILLE RICHARDS, industrial designer and former Washington girl, and her husband and business partner, Harper Richards, pause over the coffee cups to discuss plans for a show room for a New York firm. The Richards, who live in Chicago, are vacationing in Washington

Mary Haworth's Mail

Ideally Happy in Six Years' Marriage, Newly Blessed With Darling Son, Woman Is Feeling Bored With Matrimony, or Maybe With Husband

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married for six years to a very thoughtful, goodnatured man—the "perfect husband" type. He is a good provider, we have a nice home and many friends; and just recently we became the very proud parents of a darling baby son.

We have been ideally happy, have many interests in common, and we aren't the type that stays home all the time just because we have a baby. We share many outdoor sports, such as golfing, fishing, swimming, etc., and we go out frequently to dance or play cards.

We got married quite young and had just a week together before John went overseas with the Army; but we had gone together for quite a long while before that, so ours wasn't a hasty war marriage. John was away for two years and I was completely faithful to him. I had no desire to date other men, although I had plenty of chances to do so.

Has a History of Nervousness

I WORKED in business until shortly before our baby was born, because I am very nervous and must keep busy all the time; and I certainly have enough to do now, for I take full care of the baby and run the house without help. But I am afraid I am getting bored with marriage, or possibly with my husband—or possibly just restless. And I can't understand why.

I am extremely nervous, as I say, and have been to doctors about it, but will never get over it entirely. No matter what I do, the restless uneasy feeling remains, and I have been wondering if I should consult a psychologist. I am in such a muddle I don't know which way to turn, and I hope you can help me, for I truly need help, I think.

Incidentally, there is no "other man" in the picture. I never would be untrue to my husband, and although I find myself looking with interest at other men, that's as far as it goes. E. B.

Most People Feel Somewhat Baffled

DEAR E. B.: Most people are in a muddle, unconsciously, if they stop to think of it; because outside the thinning ranks of "true believers" who firmly hold that man's destination is Heaven or Hell after death, most people have no sure convictions about the meaning of life; or the purpose of their existence.

And many people, more sensitive to their unconscious states than others, are restless and uneasy by temperament, due to lurking awareness of personal feeling that human existence—as they sense it—is somewhat like an ocean voyage on uncharted seas, in a small boat going who-knows-where?

This type of person, when as yet immature—i. e., when "perfect happiness" for himself is still first and chief concern—usually tries to outrun his inner uncertainties by keeping busy all the time at work or play. Because when he comes to full pause, or otherwise "idles" his attention, he feels insecure and nervously defensive against something; and also frustrated in his wish for idyllic security—and frustration equates "boredom" always.

You Miss the Best In Chasing Mirages

Now, it seems to me that the basic "pacifier" of such uneasiness consists in realizing that forms of happiness known to humans are "imperfect," always leaving something to be desired, that very probably never will be found. Also, in learning to practice soul-felt appreciation of all that's good in today's experience—such as conjugal amity, infant-care, friendships shared, happy social-play, etc.—instead of panting heedlessly through the present, with sights fixed on a mirage of future bliss.

So, for advice, stop rushing. Stop running away from anxiety-feelings; and stop trying to "rush" life into giving you an outsize piece of pie. Probably you've noticed that solid weight usually is a principal attribute of stability. And solid weight in human character is usually developed by daily fidelity to immediate duties, not by "flighty" discontented performance—such as you are tending toward.

Possibly you do need first-hand help in reconciling yourself to your lot in life, for you may be inordinately ambitious, yet wing-clipped insofar as opportunities or talents to soar are concerned; and unconsciously you may resent housewifery on a full-time basis. Thus a good psychologist might be a useful sounding board, and well worth trying, if available. M. H.

How to Keep That Tan Alive

To keep that diminishing tan alive, match a liquid tint to your skin's present glow, and learn to apply a few drops of liquid rouge, suggests the September issue of Charm, the magazine for the business girl.

Let your nail polish and lipstick deepen into more jewel-like tones; let coral give way to carnelian; let pink surrender to garnet. Preserve the copper-penny high-lights which summer minted for your hair. Aid and abet them with a tinted shampoo rinse. Once in a while, set your curls with cream hair dressing and send a light spray of brilliantine over the ends.

Maintain fair-weather standards of grooming. Legs should appear as sleek under hose as they did when they dashed bare around the beach. A switch to warmer fabrics makes perspiration control as vital as ever.

Keep on the move. Don't pick up extra pounds or allow muscles to grow slack now that you're not racing up and down the beach or around a tennis court. Take walks during your lunch hour, and on weekends, head for the country. Try bowling or indoor swimming or at least a daily quota of exercises at home. Summer's blessings are real and worth preserving.

Lamps Get Taller, Tables Lower; May Be the Twain Shall Meet

A TOUCH OF HUMOR—Scotch bag piper topped by linen shade is gay jug lamp

LAMP DRAMA — Hand-carved walnut dancer lends modern touch (36 inches high)

TABLE ELEGANCE — Painted milk glass simulates giant pineapple. Chiffon shade

SHADES OF CHIPPENDALE—Adapted from antique English desk stand. Brass mounts

By Vivian Brown
AP Newsfeatures Writer.

It looks as if floor lamps have gone to the tables. Lamps are getting higher and higher—some reaching 36 inches—and as tables sink lower and lower, some just a few inches from the floor, perhaps the two will meet. Then all you'll have to do is move your floor lamp up to the table to be in style.

Decorating Inhibitions are tossed to the winds these days when lamps are purchased. There is no set formula, though good taste decrees that lamps blend in scale and type with your decorating scheme.

Designers are putting more effort into achieving the individuality that housewives seek. More imagination and better materials are going into budget-priced lamps as they get taller and taller, bringing a sense of importance into rooms.

Many bases are white, offering smart balance to today's homes, colorful in wallpaper, rugs, draperies and upholstery. There are bases of hand-blown glass, optic crystal, crackled crystal, milch glass, leather, wood, pottery, brass and nickel. China bases are now being made by American craftsmen, and these are being used in pin-up type, vanity and table lamps as well as dainty china figurines, ideal for the boudoir.

Today when you buy a lamp your shade matches it, another pleasant surprise. No longer do you find quaint little ruffles on lovely antique reproductions, or little bitty coverings for huge pottery vases. Shades are made of everything from paper and raffia to silk and glass, are styled and scaled to complement a particular lamp.

Casual lamps for country houses take on new charm even in simple pottery or brass. Lamps that lend humor offer a pick-up even to the somber home with classical lines. The right lamp in the right place can unify a room and improve its looks.

In rooms where there are several lamps, all do not have to be of the same color or same material unless they are being used on matching tables.

Friday: Another Fashion Forecast by Peggy Preston

Did you see Peggy Preston's Sunday story about the "Revised Look" in coming fall fashions? This Friday Peggy brings you the second report in her series, a preview of basic wool dress designs. She'll discuss such fabrics as jersey, corduroy, and sheer wool, with special mention of "separates" for college girls and Government workers. Artist Rae Hesler will illustrate.

Also this Friday, style authority Tobe' has a special bulletin for you about smart casual coats for next season.

Don't miss this timely fashion news tomorrow in The Washington Post.

Designer Says

You Should Wear Correct Jewelry Too

New York, N. Y., Aug. 16.—Marianne Ostier, celebrated Viennese jewelry designer who sculptures precious pieces in platinum, palladium and gold, is now teaching American jewelers how to tell their patrons the correct way to wear their jewels.

From her long study of jewels in relation to their wearers, Mme. Ostier has concluded that "too often a piece is selected—and sold—for its own sake alone, without regard to its effect on the woman who is going to wear it."

"A woman with long, slender fingers," for instance, according to Mme. Ostier, "should wear her engagement ring with the diamond set horizontally. This minimizes the extreme length of the hand, for the eye follows the horizontal lines of the ring. The girl with stubby fingers should have the diamond in her ring extending down her finger to elongate it.

"Ear clips must nestle in the little hollow between cheekbone and ear-lobe to form an harmonious interlude between face and head. Palladium, the precious white metal, should be used for large ear clips, because it is light in weight and more comfortable.

"If she is fair and blue-eyed, sapphires or aquamarines are most becoming. For the dark but not highly colored, rubies or pink sapphires lend rosiness to her complexion.

"The woman with a long, thin face should be fitted with ear clips that are broad at the base and narrower at top.

"A high necklace or choker should be avoided by the woman with a short neck, for they tend to make the neck appear even shorter. It would be better for her to wear a brooch or a pair of clips. If she must have a necklace it should be of great length to create a swan-like illusion.

"A heavy arm is considerably pared down by a bulky bracelet, while a slim arm can be made to appear rounder by slender, graceful arm ornaments. A big bold watch on a thin arm looks just as inappropriate as a too-large hat on a tiny woman, while a dainty little timepiece is out of place on a fleshy arm."

Bottled Water Pays Tax; Pop a 'Food'

Carbonated, sparkling or spring water delivered in bottles is subject to the District sales tax. Ginger ale or Tom Collins mix are considered foods and are exempt, city authorities reminded last night.

Ten field men checking retail establishments in the city found that the question about the beverages was raised frequently.

Sales Tax Administrator Allan F. Brooke also reminded stores that members of the Diplomatic Corps, who are issued identification cards by the State Department, are exempted from the sales tax. Merchants will not be required to pay a tax on such sales.

Purchasers of businesses in the city were reminded they should notify the sales tax office five days before taking possession so that taxes owed by the outgoing propietor may be collected. If such notice is not given, the new owner will become liable for the taxes owed, Brooke said .

Montreal-N.Y. Run

Airline Sues CAB to Bar Competitor

Colonial Airlines, Inc., sued yesterday in District Court to prevent operation of a competing Canadian line on its Montreal-New York route.

Colonial sued the five members of the Civil Aeronautics Board. The suit asks for injunctions and other relief and charges a conspiracy to establish unfair competition.

The domestic airline contends the application in this case of the United States Canadian Air Agreement of June 3, 1949, is unconstitutional. It asserts anti-trust laws would be violated.

The competing line is Trans-Canadian Airlines. Colonial asserts it is placed in a "delicate and precarious" position by the proposed competition since the Montreal-New York line is its best source of revenue.

Hardy Clashes With Fleming At Hearing

Chairman Philip B. Fleming of the Maritime Commission and Representative Porter Hardy (D., Va.) clashed angrily last night at the windup of a House committee investigation into the commission's alleged "benevolence" to ship builders.

Hardy is chairman of the Executive Expenditures Committee which has been airing charges by the General Accounting Office that the commission paid shipbuilders at least "25 million dollars too much" in subsidies on six vessels for the U. S. merchant marine.

After all the testimony had been taken, Hardy asked Fleming "as a matter of courtesy" if he had anything to add.

Fleming strode to the committee table, glared at special counsel Gordon Peyton, and announced:

"I have never seen anything in my life like the conduct of this committee and its counsel. I have been in Government 40 years and I have never seen witnesses so browbeaten.

"Your counsel has a prosecution complex."

Hardy admonished:

"Had I known you would be so critical I would not have called you."

Peyton apparently started to apologize for any "browbeating" that might have occurred but Hardy stopped him, saying that any apology should come from General Fleming.

"I have no apology to make," Fleming shot back.

Hardy ordered the remark stricken from the record.

Hardy said the committee will review the case in executive session, but indicated the hearings may be resumed after the evidence is sifted.

New Phone Exchange In Effect Sunday

Johnson-2, a new telephone exchange in the Southeast, will go into effect midnight Saturday.

The exchange will be serviced by new equipment installed at the Congress Heights dial-telephone center, 3726 Nichols ave. se.

Initially, several hundred phones will be served by the new exchange, relieving the Lincoln and Twining central offices.

Graves Still Unidentified At Gallinger

The District government failed yesterday to discover identification of the bones and caskets dug up at Gallinger Hospital Tuesday.

If further efforts to locate records of identification fail today, William H. Cary, jr., director of the Bureau of Public Health Engineering, said he would ask the Commissioners for blanket authorization to rebury or otherwise dispose of remains dug up.

The remains were brought to light during excavation of a gas line to serve a new crippled children's ward to be built behind the District jail, just north of the hospital's contagious ward. Cary ordered excavation work halted until legality of reburial is determined.

District employes ferreted out some 200 records of persons buried in the area when it was a potter's field. The records were for 1906, the year before the District switched to cremation of pauper dead. However the papers did not indicate where particular bodies were buried on the grounds.

The District code requires approval of next of kin before remains may be reburied. If a further record search proves futile today, Cary said he would ask for the blanket reburial authorization.

There were at least three different locations on the hospital grounds for the paupers' graves, at different times, records revealed. Indications are the grounds were so used at least as early as 1852, Cary said.

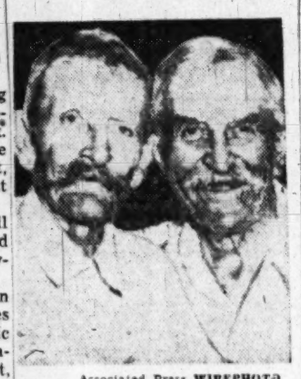
Few Republicans Among Judges, Truman Advised

By The Associated Press

Two Republican senators called President Truman's attention yesterday to the fact that only one justice of the Supreme Court and only 65 of the 283 Federal judges throughout the United States and its territories are Republicans.

In a joint statement, Senators Smith and Hendrickson of New Jersey proposed that the President take a first step toward creating a better balance by appointing Republicans to two new judgships affecting New Jersey. Smith said neither he nor Hendrickson has particular candidates in mind. He declared they were merely expressing the principle that "our Federal judiciary must stand above party and above reproach."

115 Miles Parted Them 60 Years



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

The Lyon's Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK—Elizabeth Janeway's new novel, "The question of Gregory," is about the disintegration of a Washington official under pressure. Mrs. Janeway and her husband were friends of the late James V. Forrestal . . . Richard Quine, the former husband of Susan Peters, now is on a talent hunt for Columbia Pictures. At the Ritz-Carlton in Boston he heard a girl singing magnificently a few rooms away. Quine rushed there hopefully, peeked in at the open door, and saw Judy Garland.

In Washington last week Burnett Hershey visited the office of Vice President Barkley, and greeted him with an assurance: "I won't ask you any questions about your romantic activities" . . . "Oh, go right ahead," said Mr. Barkley. "I don't mind" . . . "You don't?" said Mr. Hershey. "Aren't you annoyed at the publicity about your date-making?" . . . "No. And no committee plans to investigate that," said Barkley. "There's no law against such things—yet."

Faye Emerson Roosevelt was at the Milton Berle-Joyce Mathews wedding reception, kissed and embraced the bride and groom and then, too late, remembered that she was suffering from poison ivy . . . Macoco, the Argentine envoy to El Morocco, is retiring from the ball-point pen business. "I have 12,000 pens left," he said, "and will gladly contribute them to a fund for underprivileged children" . . . Alfred Hitchcock will appear, as is his custom, in his new movie, "Stage Fright." He'll be seen at a garden party, refusing to buy flowers from his daughter, Patricia.

At the World ORT Congress in Paris last month, the Polish delegation attacked the American delegation, and accussed American women of being more interested in chicken dinners and tea parties than in aiding DP's . . . United States Delegate Joe Tuvim, father of Judy Holliday, replied by referring to Poland's police state as contrasted to the political democracy enjoyed by Americans, and then added: "But I must admit that the Polish delegation's statement about American chicken dinners and tea parties is partly true. It is a matter of common knowledge that America did give a tea party —in Boston, in 1775."

Last week a group of Congressmen were discussing the Federal Government's system of accounting, and a Nebraska legislator said it was comparable to the system once tried by a colleague of his. The lawmaker decided to get a memo book and keep in it a record of his daily expenses, so that he could study the figures and regulate the expenditures. Then he died, and his executors found the memo book. They opened it and found that it contained only one item, which read: "1 Memo Book —35c."

Falls Church Board Grants School Funds

The Falls Church School Board last night authorized expenditure of $3100 for desks and chairs for four extra classrooms in the Madison-Jefferson School.

The extra rooms will be converted from other use.

In another action, the board approved a list of teacher appointments submitted by School Supt. Irvin Schmitt, and based on the school staff employed by Fairfax County which operated the school last year.

Principal Blanche Wheat told the board that the teaching staff at Madison-Jefferson School was four teachers short.

The board also was informed that the school administration planned to open new offices at 1057 W. Broad st., in West Falls Church, on Tuesday.

Army Band to Play At Walter Reed

The Army Medical Center's 304th Army Band under the direction of Master Sergt. Edward Praisner will offer a concert at 7:15 p. m. Friday in the Formal Gardens at Walter Reed Hospital.

These concerts will be held each Tuesday and Friday evening during August and September. The public has been invited to attend free of charge.

Friday night's concert will include renditions of "Bitter Sweet," "Yankee Rhythm," "La Rosita" and "Park Avenue Fantasia."

Aide Wins Award by Chance

Mrs. Letta I. DeVoss of Peoria, Ill., has won the Agriculture Department's Superior Service Award, because a dinner guest was late.

Mrs. DeVoss, a scientific aide at the Bureau of Agriculutral and Industrial Chemistry research laboratory in Peoria, volunteered to test a new substance derived from soybean protein. It seemed to behave like egg white, and the researchers thought it might make a fluffy and nutritious meringue for pies. Mrs. DeVoss started cooking a batch to test its whipping qualities.

The Man Who Came to Dinner Late failed to arrive as scheduled. He had been invited to watch the whipping operation. So Mrs. DeVoss left the mixture on the stove.

Suddenly she noticed that, at 190 degrees fahrenheit, it had formed a jelly-like mass. She called a superior. He rushed over, took one look, and started dancing with joy.

At long last they had accidentally discovered how to get a jellified product from vegetable protein.

The product has been named Gelsoy, and is being licensed for use as a jellifiying agent for food products, and also as an adhesive. It soon will be in commercial production, the Department says.

Also, Dr. R. T. Milner, director of the Peoria laboratory, adds: "It turned out that it makes a fine meringue."

Hero Worship

Most Dads are heroes to their children. At one time or another, baseball and football players, movie actors and actresses, and a variety of other people in the public eye become heroes to impressionable boys and girls. Hero worship is a common thing.

But is it a good thing? Generally, we put a stamp of approval on the idea of looking up to someone else. Supposedly youngsters, if they have special heroes, are inspired to be like them. Nor can one deny that hero worship may often have this effect.

There are dangers, though. Heroes may have feet of clay. They may not always live up to the expectations of their youthful admirers. Another possible pitfall is the tendency of the hero worshipping approach to ignore or "play down" the less dramatic, everyday fine qualities of humble people. To learn to appreciate a hard workingman who is a fine husband and father is harder than to admire a "former boy" orchestra leader. Yet in most instances the qualities of the former are finer even though less dramatic.

Parents should not discourage hero worship, even if they could, but it is a good idea to help youngsters also learn to "look up to" the everyday virtues of men and women about them.

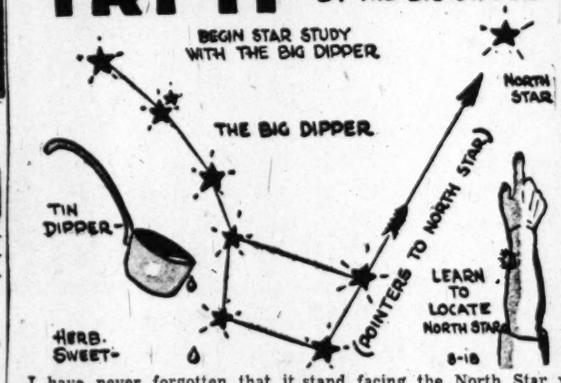
Laff-a-Day

"Sorry we had to commandeer your cart, Tony! Can't you make the siren a little louder?"

TRY IT LOCATE THE NORTH STAR BY THE BIG DIPPER



I have never forgotten that it was during my first year at Boy Scout camp when one of the counselors pointed out the constellation called the Big Dipper to me, and I made my first acquaintance with the stars. The Big Dipper, as the name suggests, is shaped like a big tin water dipper.

The two stars farthest from the handle in the dipper are in line with the north star, and thus they are known as the Pointers. The distance from the Pointers to the north star is about equal to the length of the dipper. When you stand facing the North Star you are turned almost true north with the east to your right, the south to your back, and the west to your left. Watch during the year to see how the Big Dipper rotates about the North Star, and yet the Pointers always point in its direction.

Now is a good time to start your star study, and you will find that the Big Dipper can serve as a guide to other star groups.

Tomorrow—Set up a business and sell lemonade.

What's the Verdict?

HEADSTRONG BOY

Q. A headstrong highschool boy 17 years old persuaded a 15-year-old classmate, to marry him secretly. They obtained a license by falsifying their ages, since the law of their State provided that boys under 18 and girls under 16 did not have the capacity to marry. They never set up housekeeping, and the marriage was kept secret. They finally drifted apart but were never divorced because the boy convinced himself and the girl that they never had been married, being under age. When he came of full age he married another girl, and is prosecuted for bigamy. When the evidence of the two marriages is in, his lawyer moves for a directed verdict of acquittal because of the State law saying a boy of 17 can't marry. Is the motion granted?

A. The general rule is that marare younger than the lawful age, are voidable, as distinguished from void. This is to protect the legitimacy of children of the union, among other reasons. Thus formal action has to be taken to cancel the marriage, which is good until such action is taken . The boy in this case being twice-married, with no canceling ceremony, may be convicted of bigamy. Motion denied. F. L. D.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Sounds Like the Easiest Terms in Town

William B. Switkes of 6420 7th st. nw. notes that one of our afternoon contemporaries, recently carried an ad which read:

"Why Pay $75 For This Truetone Auto Radio. Pay only $39.95 . . . Easy Terms: $0.00 Down, $0.00 Weekly."

COINCIDENCE DEPT.

Glenda E. McNeill of 81 P st. nw. reports a quadruple graduation season that must have had friends and relatives going in hock with a mass present-buying program.

Glenda was graduated from Howard University this June; her two younger sisters, Melba and Florence, were graduated from Dunbar High School; and her other sister, Jeane, was graduated from Miner Teachers College.

GESUNDHEIT.

When goldenrod and ragweed
Go courting on the breeze,
Tormented souls allergic
To pollens start to wheeze.

We've taken shots of clover,
Alfalfa, blue grass, too.
But still we sniff and burble:
"Ahh-ahh-ahh-ahh-ahh-CHOO!"

Smith Dawless,
1010 16th st. nw.

MISCELLANY

If you don't like a 2 per cent sales tax, wait'll you stop at a New York hotel and get clipped 5 per cent on your room rent . . .

Amy B. Goldstein of 3800 Massachusetts ave. nw. says that she and her husband enjoyed their vacation drive along the Maine Turnpike, "but for conservative 25-mile-per-hour Washingtonians, their suggested 60-mile-per-hour speed limit was a bit steep" . . . Osborne T. Poitier of 3731 Jay st. ne., and Ernest W. Britt of 3725 Jay st. ne., suspect that there are a lot of mighty smart fish in the Tidal Basin. They report: "The rascals sneak up behind the hook and steal the bait; we lost a pound of shrimp without getting anything but a lot of fresh air" . . . Maurice and Etienetta Weeks of 1931, 11th st. nw., write from Oak Bluffs, Mass., to tell me how much they enjoy getting the mail edition of The Washington Post . . . Leroy Krider of 527 Tuckerman st. nw., found an injured baby squirrel a few days ago, and has nursed it back to health. Now the squirrel is getting so chipper he won't stay in his makeshift shoebox home, and Leroy is looking for a cage . . . Margaret Faulds of 2221 Prout st se., wonders why one of our contemporaries changed "Massacre River" to "Massage River" in the Naylor Theater's ad the other day . . . Dorothy W. Clark of 1502 N. Utah st., Arlington, Va., counters with an ad for a "spuirrel" coat offered in our own paper . . . And Blanche Berlin of 812 Randolph st. nw., catches one of our afternoon contemporaries offering a "His and Hers Howel Set," and wonders if they know that a howel is a smoothing tool used on the inside of casks . . . Don Roth of 603 Erie ave., Takoma Park, Md., reports that the only female linotype operator at the Washington College Press didn't have a chance to fix her hair before coming to work the other morning. "Today it's not a hair-do," remarked a fellow operator. "It's a hair-don't."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

I would be interested to know how many people wrote in to tell you that the jingle about the billboards hiding the trees was written by Ogden Nash and not by some unsung Britisher.

Martin Russell,
546 S. 18th st.
Arlington, Va.

Dear Martin:

Thus far, only seven, including you. But more usually come straggling in during the next week or two.

First under the wire were: Frances Swann of 4229 46th st. nw., Rena Brett Speed of 1909 N st. nw., H. Welsh of 2826 Newton st. ne., H. Jayne Greene of 2140 N st. nw.; Susan L. Helfrich of 620 21st st. nw., and Howard Allen of our promotion department. Bill.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Male tiger kitten; mother is half-Persian." (Oliver 5380.)

"Three adorable black kittens, 7 weeks old, two beautiful blacks, 9 months old; all housebroken." (Owens 6959.)

"Dear little kitten, 2 months old; gray and white, looks almost like a chinchilla." (Georgia 5361.)

"Five kittens, just plain tabby but wonderful mousers; will somebody in the country take all of them?" (Wisconsin 8322.)

"Three fat, playful 6-week-old kittens, two male, one female; will deliver." (Warfield 7935.)

"Year-old mother dog and three 5-week-old pups; they'll make grand pets." (Randolph 2137.)

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Speeders cause 45 per cent of all driving fatalities.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

There's an old saying that "whatever goes up has to come down." The fellow who descended 4500 feet into the ocean in a diving ball seems to have great faith that the converse of that proposition is also true.

WONDER IF BOB HOPE NEEDS ANOTHER WRITER

The District Line Club has made good on its threat to publish a "Gab Sheet" which not only records the activities of the group but also prints the gags that I turn down.

A few samples from the current edition make me wonder whether I'm such a good picker. They include:

"Did you hear about the cow that drank ink—and mood indigo? . . . Or about the bashful pebble who grew up to be a little boulder? . . . Definition: A columnist is a fellow with a good sense of rumor . . . Potomac River Romance: Buoy Meets Gull."

Listen to the District Line on the air Monday through Friday at 1:30 p. m., over WRC.

Merry Menagerie--By Walt Disney

"You can cut that 'wee, wee, wee, wee, wee' stuff—we're HOME now!"

Fish Joins Party

Clinton, Tenn., (U.P.).—Leo Daugherty, R. L. Daugherty, Bob Asbury and Ray Jones vouch for this one. The four were fishing from a skiff when one hung his line on a tree stump. He smacked his line against the water to free it. There was a swirl and a five-pound bass leaped into the air, falling into the skiff. That was the only fish the quartet caught all day.

Merry-Go-Round

California Democrats Muddled

(Editor's note—While Drew Pearson is on vacation, the Washington Merry-Go-Round is being written by his old partner, Robert S. Allen.)

By Robert S. Allen

California's muddled Democratic scramble for Governor is getting more hectic by the hour—although the primary is still a year off.

Robert S. Allen

The air is blue with tales of intrigues and secret deals among the pack of hot-eyed aspirants.

At least a half-dozen are in the field, led by James Roosevelt, eldest son of the late President, and George Luckey, millionaire cattleman, openhanded 1948 Truman supporter and bitter foe of young Roosevelt.

Luckey press agents claim he has White House backing. Spokesmen of the President emphatically say he is keeping strict hands-off this and all other State contests. Roosevelt says he has AFL and other labor support. Luckey and other candidates counter that California labor is split on a choice.

Curious aspect of the feverish scramble is that much of the undercover jockeying centers in Washington. Luckey has made a number of hush-hush trips to the Capital, and most of the other candidates, or their agents, have made treks. All filter a constant stream of rumors and tips Eastward.

Latest to reach Democratic National Headquarters is the following:

A secret conference recently took place between James Roosevelt and George McLain, top poobah of California old-age-pension promoters. Purpose of the meeting was to consider a Roosevelt-McLain ticket, the former for Governor, the latter for Lieutenant Governor. Cement for the alliance would be McLain's "delivery" of his 250,000 pension followers and Roosevelt's public support of their pension plan, on which the State ballots in a special election this November.

Red-hot kicker on this hot tale is—that one of the prime movers of this alleged deal is Arthur Samish, massive "king" of California lobbyists.

Note 1: California's population has increased so enormously in recent years that the State is certain of a minimum of seven new congressional seats in the 1950 reapportionment. It now has 23.

Note 2: Republican insiders say the party will ditch embattled Attorney General Frederick Napoleon Howser next year. He insists he will run again.

Secret Document

Lieut. Gen. Lawton Collins was very insistent on clearing his desk when photographers swarmed in after his elevation to Army Chief of Staff. They were curious about this caution and Collins grinningly explained:

"It's because I got burnt once. I was very embarrassed by some pictures made at my headquarters in the ETO when the Germans surrendered. I was waiting for two big-shot Kraut generals to be brought in and was writing a letter to my wife. I had just written her about the impending affair when the two Krauts were brought in. I left the letter lying on my desk while the photographers took pictures, and I'll be darned if one of the pictures that was published didn't show clearly my letter and what I had written to my wife."

Navy League

The truculently anti-Air Force Navy League is due for a rough going-over when the B-36 probe resumes next week. Representative James Van Zandt, (R., Pa.), whose charges precipitated the investigation, is on close terms with the league.

Displaced Persons

Neither side minced words in the closed-door meeting of the Senate Immigration subcommittee when Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) refused to budge on his blockade of the House-passed bill to liberalize the "anti-Semetic and anti-Catholic" displaced persons law.

"Charges that this act is discriminatory are hokum," McCarran snapped. "I worked with Senator Reyercomb (1948 West Virginia Republican lame-duck) on this act when it was drafted, and I know the charges are untrue."
